HEARINGS SET ON IKE'S TAX PLAN

Chinese Red Troops Carried On British Ships, Probe Told

Witness Says U. S. Allies Increase Trade With Foe

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—Senate investigators heard with indignation today that Britain and other allies of the U. S. have "tremendously" stepped up trading with Red China. They called on President Eisenhower to state clearly this country's attitude toward such trade.

Chairman McCarthy (R-Wis) and other members of the investigations subcommittee spoke out after hearing a committee staff member testify that:

At least one hundred British and 62 other Western-flag ships were trading with the Chinese Communists in the first three months of this year—although many of the countries involved are fighting the Chinese Reds in Korea.

British Vessels Carried Reds

Two British-owned ships were used to transport Communist troops along the Chinese coast and later were hired to transport goods for this country's Mutual Security Administration.

Britain's exports to Red China jumped from $345,000 in the first two months of 1952 to $5,750,000 in the first two months of this year—an increase of about 1,700 per cent.

This testimony came from Assistant Counsel Robert F. Kennedy, a brother of Sen. John Kennedy (D-Mass). The witness said much of his information came from the U. S. Office of Naval Intelligence.

McCarthy and some of his fellow investigators hit the ceiling. The Wisconsin lawmaker said such "aid to Red China more than offsets any military contribution the British have made" in the Korean War.

"Unheard Of," McCarthy Says

"It is unheard of in the history of the world," McCarthy declared, "for a country to be transporting the troops that are killing its own soldiers."

Sen. Symington (D-Mo) said he was exercised, too, about an apparent difference of opinion between Secretary of Defense Wilson and the State Department over American policy toward Western trade with the Chinese Reds.

He proposed McCarthy write Eisenhower and ask for a "clearing up" of the matter—and also of what Symington called an "obvious subterfuge" by which this government keeps secret the nature of some trade items it regards as strategic but its allies do not consider strategic.

"That is an excellent suggestion," McCarthy said, adding he would write the letter today.

Churchill Takes Oratorical Slap At Labor Leader

LONDON, May 20 (INS)—Prime Minister Churchill took a gentle, oratorical slap at Laborite Leader Clement Attlee today for his "mix up" of President Eisenhower and Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy that caused tempers to boil on both sides of the Atlantic last week.

Sir Winston, speaking in the House of Commons, accused the Laborites of "making mischief" between the United States and Britain.

Laborite Shouts "McCarthy"

Without mentioning the former prime minister by name, Sir Winston took note of Attlee's highly controversial statement after a Laborite shouted "McCarthy" as the prime minister was talking about inviting Eisenhower to Britain.

Sir Winston said:

"I think it is a great mistake to mix up the head of the great American republic with a politician or member of Congress of that country."

Hopes Ike Will Visit Britain

He was referring to Attlee's statement that he often wondered "who is more powerful — President Eisenhower or Senator McCarthy."

Sir Winston expressed the hope that the American President would visit Britain some day, but said:

"I certainly do not feel differences of view or emphasis between the United States and Britain at the present time would in any way justify or require procedure of such magnitude."

Guilty In Poison Trial

Richard LaForce, brilliant 19-year-old California Institute of Technology student, sits disconsolately in his chair just after he was found guilty yesterday at Los Angeles of mingling poisons with intent to injure Robert Hayden, husband of the girl he loved. He was found innocent of a charge of attempted murder.

La Force Guilty Of Poisoning His Best Friend's Beverages

LOS ANGELES, May 20 (INS)—A Superior Court jury today found "near-genius" student Richard La Force guilty of mingling poison with beverages but acquitted him of attempted murder of his best friend over the love of the latter's beauteous wife.

La Force was accused of two counts of attempted murder by poison and two charges of mingling poison with beverages.

The charges arose over a "triangle of 19-year-olds" in which La Force admittedly coveted Mrs. Joyce Hayden, the wife of his best friend, Richard Hayden. All three principals are 19.

Winces At Verdict

La Force, the brilliant science student from the California Institute of Technology, winced at the decision which found him guilty on one count and made him subject to a prison sentence of from one to ten years. Sentence will be pronounced June 10.

A conviction on the attempted murder counts would have brought a prison term up to 40 years.

A jury of eight women and four men threw out the two attempted murder counts and one count of mingling poison and then found the handsome, crew-cut student guilty of the fourth count.

Girl Denies Intimacies

This decision stemmed directly from L Force's testimony that he purposely walked into a police trap—and was caught with poison on his person—because he wanted to protect Joyce. He said he believed Joyce was trying to do away with her husband to clear the way for their love.

He testified to intimacies, which she stoutly denied.

La Force was crestfallen when he heard the verdict. He commented bitterly.

"At least there are two or three people who know the truth of this thing."

La. City Prepares For Record Flood

LAKE CHARLES, La., May 20 (AP)—A bigger flood "than anything that ever happened here before" was predicted today for this Southwest Louisiana port city of 50,000 by U. S. Weather Bureau Forecaster Paul S. Cook.

Water from the flooding Calcasieu River is expected to touch the nine foot mark on the city docks gauge by 7 a.m. (CST) Thursday morning, Cook reported. Flood stage is five feet.

At noon today the gauge registered 6.23 feet and there was some minor flooding on city streets. Nearly 100 families have been evacuated from homes on low lying residential areas, chiefly north of the city. The Red Cross is set up, but chiefly as a preparedness measure for expected high water.

Fire Plug Thieves Fined

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP)—Three men were fined $50 apiece today for trying to steal a fire hydrant.

City workers had disconnected the 900-pound fire plug and left it lying at a street corner.

Three Negroes were wheeling it away in a hand cart when two patrolmen in a prowl car overtook them.

Vacant Jobs Abolished

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP)—Mayor D'Alesandro today ordered that 400 vacant city jobs be abolished "where possible" to help provide pay raises totaling four million dollars for some 12,000 city employes.

Owen Lattimore Trial Delayed Indefinitely

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—The perjury trial of Owen Lattimore, scheduled for Oct. 6, was put off indefinitely today.

U. S. District Judge Luther W. Youngdahl signed an order, requested by the Government, wiping out the trial date and holding up all further proceedings in the case.

U. S. Attorney Leo A. Rover asked the order to give the Government time to appeal from a recent ruling by Judge Youngdahl throwing out four of the seven charges against Lattimore.

Cecil County Sheriff May Be Named U.S. Marshal For Md.

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP) — The Baltimore Sun said tonight Sheriff Nathan Kaplan of Cecil County is in line for appointment as U. S. Marshal for Maryland "within the next several days."

The story quoted a spokesman in U. S. Sen. Beall's office as saying Kaplan, a Republican, had the endorsement of both Beall and Senator Butler to replace Richard C. O'Connell, Democrat who has held the job since 1947.

O'Connell, whose term doesn't expire until July 27, 1955, was surprised at the reported appointment.

He said he had given no thought to retiring, even after a change in the national administration, and added: "My commission gives me two more years. It would be up to the President and the Senate to change that."

The Beall spokesman was quoted as saying the fact that O'Connell has not completed his term "will not make any difference."

The Sun also said that another Republican Sheriff, Carleton Beall of Prince George's County, will be named to replace Democrat Bruce Matthews, now serving as marshal for the District of Columbia.

Kaplan, 37, was a Maryland state trooper from 1940 until 1946. He became sheriff of Cecil County in 1950.

Wilson Defends Spending Slash

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—Secretary of Defense Wilson told questioning senators today the Air Force will have almost four times as much money to spend on new aircraft and parts during the fiscal year beginning July 1 as is being spent on the current fiscal year.

Defending the cutback defense spending of the Eisenhower administration, Wilson told a Senate appropriations subcommittee that even if Congress gave him more funds than now asked it could not get more modern combat airpower.

Wilson also upheld the cutback in the Air Force's long-range goal from 143 wings to 114 wings next year and 120 in two years.

"We could build the planes for 143 wings but they would not be the right planes," he said. "Nobody in the Air Force or outside of it is advocating that."

Under a series of questions from Sen. Margaret Chase Smith (R-Me), Wilson insisted that the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, top Air Force officer, had been consulted on the new reduced defense budget.

Surgeons Revive Boy After His Heart Stops

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP)—Marcus Lewis, 6, was almost through an operation to remove his tonsils when his heart stopped beating.

University Hospital physicians cut a six-inch incision in his chest and began massaging his heart. A hospital spokesman said the surgeons got a response in three minutes, had the heart beating again in five, and in ten minutes reported that the child's heart was beating by itself.

The child was allowed to leave the operating room a half an hour later.

AFL Supports Boost In Tax For Pensions

Opposes Proposal By President That Hike Be Postponed

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—AFL President George Meany said today American workers don't want the scheduled January boost in social security taxes postponed as President Eisenhower has proposed.

Meany distributed a statement adopted by the AFL's Executive Council praising Eisenhower's proposal to forego any tax cuts this year but opposing his suggestion that the scheduled social security tax boost be postponed.

Rate Would Go To 2%

Employers and workers are now each taxed 1½ per cent of wages for old age pensions. Under present law the tax is due to go to 2 per cent next January 1. Eisenhower said in his tax speech last night that postponing the increase would be "a worthwhile saving to wage earners, and, in my judgment, is simple justice to them."

"I think the workers will be willing to pay the higher tax rate to insure the solvency of the social security fund," Meany told newsmen.

He said the 18 billion dollar fund may contain a lot of money but it is insufficient to meet expected disbursements as more and more workers reach the 65-year retirement age.

Agrees Tax Cuts Must Wait

The AFL council's statement agreed with Eisenhower that tax cuts must wait, but it said postponing the cuts only six months is probably not long enough.

"We in the AFL do not hesitate to state that we are willing to continue paying high taxes from our pay envelopes as long as the government needs the money to protect the free way of life and to safeguard world peace," the council said.

"We would like to see the business interests of the nation take the same attitude."

Meany said he had "great confidence" in Secretary of Labor Durkin, a former AFL union president, and felt Durkin was doing "as well as could be expected with the tools they've given him."

Communist Spearhead Hurled Back

SEOUL, Thursday, May 21 (AP)—Chinese Communists hurled a battalion-sized attack on the Western Front before daylight Wednesday but were sent reeling back with prohibitive losses after the spearhead smashed into an Allied outpost near T-Bone Hill.

The U. S. Eighth Army said 245 Reds were killed or wounded out of 300 to 350 Chinese who battled their way through an artillery barrage into Outpost Yoke. The rest were ejected.

Allied troops attached to a U. S. division used knives, bayonets, hand grenades and clubbed rifles in the bitter 25-minute engagement.

The Eighth Army said after this encounter the Chinese brought up reinforcements and regrouped for a second attack in battalion strength—about 750 men—but heavy Allied artillery fire broke up the formation and "the enemy could not muster another attack."

The Eighth Army reported four unidentified planes bombed and strafed a bridge along a main supply route behind Allied lines on the Western Front. It said nine casualties were inflicted and material damaged. Such announcements usually use the word "fatalities" where deaths occurred.

The Eighth Army said an investigation was started and withheld the nationality of the troops.

In the air war, Russian-built MIGs sulked in their Manchurian bases for the second straight day, refusing combat with U. S. Sabre jets scouring Northwest Korean skies.

Eisenhower, Smith Confer At White House

WASHINGTON, May 20 (INS)—President Eisenhower held an unusual evening conference today with acting secretary of state Walter Bedell Smith and two of his top advisors on national security.

The secrecy-shrouded session at the White House followed the President's earlier meeting today with the National Security Council plus the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, U. S. representative to the United Nations.

Oatis Denies He Acted As U.S. Spy In Prague

Checked "Tips" With American Embassy

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—President Eisenhower offered to negotiate the sanctions imposed on Czechoslovakia because of the imprisonment of William Oatis two weeks before the Czechs released him, the White House announced tonight.

NEW YORK, May 20 (AP)—Associated Press Correspondent William N. Oatis said tonight he never spied for the American embassy while he was a newspaperman in Czechoslovakia.

He said in a statement that he checked news tips he received with the embassy on occasions and added:

FIGHTS DEPORTATION — Jack "The Dandy" Parisi, once called the top triggerman for New York's Murder, Inc., is shown during a recess in a hearing before an Immigration Service officer at Philadelphia in which the government seeks to deport him as an undesirable. (AP Wirephoto)

"But at no time did I act as an espionage agent of the embassy in the sense that this term is understood in Western countries within the range of my experience."

Oatis' statement followed by two days his return to New York after 25 months in an Iron Curtain prison on conviction of espionage.

At a news conference, on his arrival here Monday, Oatis refused to say whether he served the U. S. government in any capacity while he was Associated Press Correspondent in Prague.

Admits He Collected Data

A reporter told him that his noncommittal stand might prove embarrassing to him. Oatis conceded that, but insisted he would stand on the record of his Prague trial for the time being.

At the trial in 1951, he was convicted of espionage on charges of transmitting Czech economic, military and political data to a foreign government—presumably the U. S.

Oatis readily admitted he collected such data. But he said that was normal news procedure and would not be a crime in this country.

His statement tonight came at the end of a day in which Oatis came home to his old newsroom—the huge, busy headquarters of The AP on the fourth floor of 50 Rockefeller Plaza.

Will Go Into Seclusion

Released with it was a statement from Frank J. Starzel, general manager of The AP, who said Oatis and his wife, Laurabelle, now "earnestly desire to withdraw into seclusion temporarily."

Later, Starzel said, Oatis will write the story of his experiences, making advance copies available generally to news media.

In his statement tonight, Oatis said:

"I appreciate the consideration reporters and photographers have shown me in their work on the story of my return home after two years and 23 days in prison in Czechoslovakia.

"A question still outstanding has to do with my relations with the United States embassy in Prague. That question I am answering now.

"In Czechoslovakia, I gathered news as Prague Bureau Chief of The Associated Press."

Second Polish Pilot Drops MIG Into Allied Hands

ROENNE, Bornholm, May 20 (AP)—A young Polish jet pilot, following a freedom trail blazed over the Baltic by a fellow officer March 5, dumped another Russian-built MIG15 into Allied hands today and asked for asylum.

Police quoted him as saying he broke away from a formation flight over Polish territory for his 60-mile dash from Communist rule.

He crash-landed the craft on a military drilling field of this Danish island, climbed out smiling and identified himself as a friend of Lt. Franciszedk Jarecki, whose flight from Poland to Bornholm 76 days ago gave Western technicians their first chance to inspect an undamaged MIG—the fastest fighter in the Communist world.

Plane Suffers Damage

There was damage this time.

The new arrival identified by police as Lt. Zdzislaw Jazwenski, passed up the dangerously short runways at Roenne Airport, where Jarecki landed, and chose the drilling ground north of town. The undercarriage of his plane crumpled and a wing snapped when, speeding across knolls and gulleys at 150 to 175 miles an hour, he hopped electric wires and slashed into a thicket.

But the engine and interior were undamaged.

The pilot was reported to have told Danish police that his MIG was of a newer type than Jarecki's.

Jet Experts Get To Work

A high military source said, however, it did not look like a prize catch. The general lines appeared the same. Top Danish jet experts worked tonight under a tarpaulin covering the plane to discover whether it contained any secrets not already known to the West. All the information needed on Jarecki's MIG was ferreted out by Danish, British and American experts before it was shipped back to Poland.

Allied Truce Strategy Conferences Continue

TOKYO, Thursday, May 21 (AP)—Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison, chief Allied truce negotiator and the top United Nations commander in the Far East, Gen. Mark Clark, huddled Wednesday for the fourth straight day on reported modifications in an Allied plan to crack the prisoner exchange deadlock and end the Korean War.

There was no indication here on what form the modifications may take when the full Allied and Communist truce delegations meet again Monday at 11 a.m. (9 p.m. Sunday, EST).

The talks are snagged over how to handle 34,000 Koreans and 14,500 Chinese prisoners who say they will resist repatriation to Communist rule.

'Woman In Red' Is Charged With Kidnaping Youngsters

NEW YORK, May 20 (INS- — A federal warrant charging kidnaping under the Lindbergh law was issued tonight against 24-year-old Mrs. Barbara Grimm, "the woman in red" who made off with two small children in Washington, D. C., last Friday.

The federal action came shortly after the sobbing, repentant young woman was arraigned as a kidnaper under New York law.

Mrs. Grimm could be sentenced to life imprisonment if tried and convicted on the federal charge Death can be imposed under the Lindbergh Act if the victim of a kidnaping is harmed, which was not true in this case.

Also caught up in the legal actions was Clifton Bradford, Sr., father of the two kidnaped children, Clifton, Jr., and Diane, 18 months. He was named a material witness and required to post $50 bond.

Mrs. Grimm, ex-convict and carnival sideshow dancer, tearfully insisted at her arraignment in magistrates' court this afternoon that she had taken the two youngsters because they had "bad living conditions."

Magistrate J. L. Lopiccolo ordered her held in $5,000 bail for a hearing next Wednesday in the pathetic climax to a five-day ordeal of aimless wandering, hitchhiked rides and frantic appeals to strangers for help.

Excess Profits Levy Extender Clears Hurdle

Reed Still Opposes Proposal But Agrees To Committee Action

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP) — Eisenhower forces took a long stride forward today in their battle for a six-month extension of the excess profits tax.

Chairman Reed (R-NY) of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee agreed to hold hearings on President Eisenhower's proposal to keep the tax on the books for another six months. It is scheduled to die June 30 unless extended by Congress.

While Reed stood his ground in staunch opposition to the plan, other members of the committee were reported weakening in their opposition. Earlier this year the 15 GOP members of the committee had voted unanimously against an extension of the tax.

The decision to begin hearings June 1 came after House Speaker Martin, carrying the ball for the Eisenhower tax program, met for two hours with the 15 GOP members of the committee, which is charged with starting all tax legislation through Congress.

Approval Is Forecast

Martin himself was cautious in discussing the tax matter with newsmen after the meeting. He said only that he was "prayerfully hopeful" the committee would agree to send the bill to the floor and predicted the tax extender would be voted "if it comes out of the committee."

One high-ranking Republican congressman who asked not to be identified by name predicted flatly the proposal will be approved with the help of Democratic votes. Others were more cautious, but agreed that inroads had been made in the once-solid GOP front on the committee.

Meanwhile Eisenhower formally submitted to Congress a six-point tax program which included a plea to keep the excess profits tax on the books for six months beyond its June 30 expiration date.

The President said he regretted the need to ask for such legislation "because I share the widespread feeling that our taxes are generally too high and that some of our tax laws are inherently defective."

"But facts are facts," Eisenhower said, "and I propose that we face them."

Reed Stands Firm

Reed said that after the meeting his opposition to extension of the excess profits tax had been changed "not a particle."

"Our first step," he said, "should be to steer the country away from the shoals of oppressive taxation and give the free enterprise system an opportunity to expand and produce income."

Eisenhower said, too, that he believes "a reduction in individual taxes must come first, for the benefit of the entire economy." He called for a reduction in personal income taxes of about 10 per cent on Jan. 1.

He laid the blame for the situation at the doorstep of the Truman administration, stating he "inherited a critically unsound state of financial affairs."

Senate Approves First Money Bill

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—The Senate passed its first regular 1954 money bill of the session today after voting floor cuts totalling about 10½ million dollars.

As finally approved, the independent offices measure carries about 446 million dollars to run 22 government commissions and agencies in the fiscal year starting July 1.

This is about six million less than the House voted and about 10½ million less than the Senate Appropriations Committee approved in sending the measure to the floor.

It is also about 726 millions less than the budget for the 22 agencies submitted by former President Truman and about 547 millions less than the same departments were voted last year.

But Democrats contended that many of the cuts claimed by the Republicans as compared with last year's appropriations and with the Truman budget were "phony" and would have to be made up later.

The Senate included in the bill authority to start 35,000 lowrent public housing units in fiscal 1954 as asked by the Eisenhower administration. The House had denied authority to start any units.

The charges arose over a "triangle of 19-year-olds" in which La Force admittedly coveted Mrs. Joyce Hayden, the wife of his best friend, Richard Hayden. All three principals are 19.

Winces At Verdict

La Force, the brilliant science student from the California Institute of Technology, winced at the decision which found him guilty on one count and made him subject to a prison sentence of from one to ten years. Sentence will be pronounced June 10.

A conviction on the attempted murder counts would have brought a prison term up to 40 years.

A jury of eight women and four men threw out the two attempted murder counts and one count of mingling poison and then found the handsome, crew-cut student guilty of the fourth count.

Girl Denies Intimacies

This decision stemmed directly from L Force's testimony that he purposely walked into a police trap—and was caught with poison on his person—because he wanted to protect Joyce. He said he believed Joyce was trying to do away with her husband to clear the way for their love.

He testified to intimacies, which she stoutly denied.

La Force was crestfallen when he heard the verdict. He commented bitterly.

"At least there are two or three people who know the truth of this thing."

Wilson Defends Spending Slash

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—Secretary of Defense Wilson told questioning senators today the Air Force will have almost four times as much money to spend on new aircraft and parts during the fiscal year beginning July 1 as is being spent on the current fiscal year.

Defending the cutback defense spending of the Eisenhower administration, Wilson told a Senate appropriations subcommittee that even if Congress gave him more funds than now asked it could not get more modern combat airpower.

Wilson also upheld the cutback in the Air Force's long-range goal from 143 wings to 114 wings next year and 120 in two years.

"We could build the planes for 143 wings but they would not be the right planes," he said. "Nobody in the Air Force or outside of it is advocating that."

Under a series of questions from Sen. Margaret Chase Smith (R-Me), Wilson insisted that the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, top Air Force officer, had been consulted on the new reduced defense budget.

Surgeons Revive Boy After His Heart Stops

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP)—Marcus Lewis, 6, was almost through an operation to remove his tonsils when his heart stopped beating.

University Hospital physicians cut a six-inch incision in his chest and began massaging his heart. A hospital spokesman said the surgeons got a response in three minutes, had the heart beating again in five, and in ten minutes reported that the child's heart was beating by itself.

The child was allowed to leave the operating room a half an hour later.

Cecil County Sheriff May Be Named U.S. Marshal For Md.

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP) — The Baltimore Sun said tonight Sheriff Nathan Kaplan of Cecil County is in line for appointment as U. S. Marshal for Maryland "within the next several days."

The story quoted a spokesman in U. S. Sen. Beall's office as saying Kaplan, a Republican, had the endorsement of both Beall and Senator Butler to replace Richard C. O'Connell, Democrat who has held the job since 1947.

O'Connell, whose term doesn't expire until July 27, 1955, was surprised at the reported appointment.

He said he had given no thought to retiring, even after a change in the national administration, and added: "My commission gives me two more years. It would be up to the President and the Senate to change that."

The Beall spokesman was quoted as saying the fact that O'Connell has not completed his term "will not make any difference."

The Sun also said that another Republican Sheriff, Carleton Beall of Prince George's County, will be named to replace Democrat Bruce Matthews, now serving as marshal for the District of Columbia.

Kaplan, 37, was a Maryland state trooper from 1940 until 1946. He became sheriff of Cecil County in 1950.

AFL Supports Boost In Tax For Pensions

Opposes Proposal By President That Hike Be Postponed

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—AFL President George Meany said today American workers don't want the scheduled January boost in social security taxes postponed as President Eisenhower has proposed.

Meany distributed a statement adopted by the AFL's Executive Council praising Eisenhower's proposal to forego any tax cuts this year but opposing his suggestion that the scheduled social security tax boost be postponed.

Rate Would Go To 2%

Employers and workers are now each taxed 1½ per cent of wages for old age pensions. Under present law the tax is due to go to 2 per cent next January 1. Eisenhower said in his tax speech last night that postponing the increase would be "a worthwhile saving to wage earners, and, in my judgment, is simple justice to them."

"I think the workers will be willing to pay the higher tax rate to insure the solvency of the social security fund," Meany told newsmen.

He said the 18 billion dollar fund may contain a lot of money but it is insufficient to meet expected disbursements as more and more workers reach the 65-year retirement age.

Agrees Tax Cuts Must Wait

The AFL council's statement agreed with Eisenhower that tax cuts must wait, but it said postponing the cuts only six months is probably not long enough.

"We in the AFL do not hesitate to state that we are willing to continue paying high taxes from our pay envelopes as long as the government needs the money to protect the free way of life and to safeguard world peace," the council said.

"We would like to see the business interests of the nation take the same attitude."

Meany said he had "great confidence" in Secretary of Labor Durkin, a former AFL union president, and felt Durkin was doing "as well as could be expected with the tools they've given him."

Communist Spearhead Hurled Back

SEOUL, Thursday, May 21 (AP)—Chinese Communists hurled a battalion-sized attack on the Western Front before daylight Wednesday but were sent reeling back with prohibitive losses after the spearhead smashed into an Allied outpost near T-Bone Hill.

The U. S. Eighth Army said 245 Reds were killed or wounded out of 300 to 350 Chinese who battled their way through an artillery barrage into Outpost Yoke. The rest were ejected.

Allied troops attached to a U. S. division used knives, bayonets, hand grenades and clubbed rifles in the bitter 25-minute engagement.

The Eighth Army said after this encounter the Chinese brought up reinforcements and regrouped for a second attack in battalion strength—about 750 men—but heavy Allied artillery fire broke up the formation and "the enemy could not muster another attack."

The Eighth Army reported four unidentified planes bombed and strafed a bridge along a main supply route behind Allied lines on the Western Front. It said nine casualties were inflicted and material damaged. Such announcements usually use the word "fatalities" where deaths occurred.

The Eighth Army said an investigation was started and withheld the nationality of the troops.

In the air war, Russian-built MIGs sulked in their Manchurian bases for the second straight day, refusing combat with U. S. Sabre jets scouring Northwest Korean skies.

Eisenhower, Smith Confer At White House

WASHINGTON, May 20 (INS)—President Eisenhower held an unusual evening conference today with acting secretary of state Walter Bedell Smith and two of his top advisors on national security.

The secrecy-shrouded session at the White House followed the President's earlier meeting today with the National Security Council plus the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, U. S. representative to the United Nations.

Oatis Denies He Acted As U.S. Spy In Prague

Checked "Tips" With American Embassy

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—President Eisenhower offered to negotiate the sanctions imposed on Czechoslovakia because of the imprisonment of William Oatis two weeks before the Czechs released him, the White House announced tonight.

NEW YORK, May 20 (AP)—Associated Press Correspondent William N. Oatis said tonight he never spied for the American embassy while he was a newspaperman in Czechoslovakia.

He said in a statement that he checked news tips he received with the embassy on occasions and added:

"But at no time did I act as an espionage agent of the embassy in the sense that this term is understood in Western countries within the range of my experience."

FIGHTS DEPORTATION — Jack "The Dandy" Parisi, once called the top triggerman for New York's Murder, Inc., is shown during a recess in a hearing before an Immigration Service officer at Philadelphia in which the government seeks to deport him as an undesirable. (AP Wirephoto)

Oatis' statement followed by two days his return to New York after 25 months in an Iron Curtain prison on conviction of espionage.

At a news conference, on his arrival here Monday, Oatis refused to say whether he served the U. S. government in any capacity while he was Associated Press Correspondent in Prague.

Admits He Collected Data

A reporter told him that his noncommittal stand might prove embarrassing to him. Oatis conceded that, but insisted he would stand on the record of his Prague trial for the time being.

At the trial in 1951, he was convicted of espionage on charges of transmitting Czech economic, military and political data to a foreign government—presumably the U. S.

Oatis readily admitted he collected such data. But he said that was normal news procedure and would not be a crime in this country.

His statement tonight came at the end of a day in which Oatis came home to his old newsroom—the huge, busy headquarters of The AP on the fourth floor of 50 Rockefeller Plaza.

Will Go Into Seclusion

Released with it was a statement from Frank J. Starzel, general manager of The AP, who said Oatis and his wife, Laurabelle, now "earnestly desire to withdraw into seclusion temporarily."

Later, Starzel said, Oatis will write the story of his experiences, making advance copies available generally to news media.

In his statement tonight, Oatis said:

"I appreciate the consideration reporters and photographers have shown me in their work on the story of my return home after two years and 23 days in prison in Czechoslovakia.

"A question still outstanding has to do with my relations with the United States embassy in Prague. That question I am answering now.

Second Polish Pilot Drops MIG Into Allied Hands

ROENNE, Bornholm, May 20 (AP)—A young Polish jet pilot, following a freedom trail blazed over the Baltic by a fellow officer March 5, dumped another Russian-built MIG15 into Allied hands today and asked for asylum.

Police quoted him as saying he broke away from a formation flight over Polish territory for his 60-mile dash from Communist rule.

He crash-landed the craft on a military drilling field of this Danish island, climbed out smiling and identified himself as a friend of Lt. Franciszedk Jarecki, whose flight from Poland to Bornholm 76 days ago gave Western technicians their first chance to inspect an undamaged MIG—the fastest fighter in the Communist world.

Plane Suffers Damage

There was damage this time.

The new arrival identified by police as Lt. Zdzislaw Jazwenski, passed up the dangerously short runways at Roenne Airport, where Jarecki landed, and chose the drilling ground north of town. The undercarriage of his plane crumpled and a wing snapped when, speeding across knolls and gulleys at 150 to 175 miles an hour, he hopped electric wires and slashed into a thicket.

But the engine and interior were undamaged.

The pilot was reported to have told Danish police that his MIG was of a newer type than Jarecki's.

Jet Experts Get To Work

A high military source said, however, it did not look like a prize catch. The general lines appeared the same. Top Danish jet experts worked tonight under a tarpaulin covering the plane to discover whether it contained any secrets not already known to the West. All the information needed on Jarecki's MIG was ferreted out by Danish, British and American experts before it was shipped back to Poland.

Allied Truce Strategy Conferences Continue

TOKYO, Thursday, May 21 (AP)—Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison, chief Allied truce negotiator and the top United Nations commander in the Far East, Gen. Mark Clark, huddled Wednesday for the fourth straight day on reported modifications in an Allied plan to crack the prisoner exchange deadlock and end the Korean War.

There was no indication here on what form the modifications may take when the full Allied and Communist truce delegations meet again Monday at 11 a.m. (9 p.m. Sunday, EST).

The talks are snagged over how to handle 34,000 Koreans and 14,500 Chinese prisoners who say they will resist repatriation to Communist rule.

Ford Co. Will Lay Off 85,000

DETROIT, May 20 (AP)—The Ford Motor Co. announced late today it is laying off 85,000 employes throughout the nation because of a strike at its Canton, Ohio, plant.

'Woman In Red' Is Charged With Kidnaping Youngsters

NEW YORK, May 20 (INS- — A federal warrant charging kidnaping under the Lindbergh law was issued tonight against 24-year-old Mrs. Barbara Grimm, "the woman in red" who made off with two small children in Washington, D. C., last Friday.

The federal action came shortly after the sobbing, repentant young woman was arraigned as a kidnaper under New York law.

Mrs. Grimm could be sentenced to life imprisonment if tried and convicted on the federal charge. Death can be imposed under the Lindbergh Act if the victim of a kidnaping is harmed, which was not true in this case.

Also caught up in the legal actions was Clifton Bradford, Sr., father of the two kidnaped children, Clifton, Jr., and Diane, 18 months. He was named a material witness and required to post $50 bond.

Mrs. Grimm, ex-convict and carnival sideshow dancer, tearfully insisted at her arraignment in magistrates' court this afternoon that she had taken the two youngsters because they had "bad living conditions."

Magistrate J. L. Lopiccolo ordered her held in $5,000 bail for a hearing next Wednesday in the pathetic climax to a five-day ordeal of aimless wandering, hitchhiked rides and frantic appeals to strangers for help.

Excess Profits Levy Extender Clears Hurdle

Reed Still Opposes Proposal But Agrees To Committee Action

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—Eisenhower forces took a long stride forward today in their battle for a six-month extension of the excess profits tax.

Chairman Reed (R-NY) of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee agreed to hold hearings on President Eisenhower's proposal to keep the tax on the books for another six months. It is scheduled to die June 30 unless extended by Congress.

While Reed stood his ground in staunch opposition to the plan, other members of the committee were reported weakening in their opposition. Earlier this year the 15 GOP members of the committee had voted unanimously against an extension of the tax.

The decision to begin hearings June 1 came after House Speaker Martin, carrying the ball for the Eisenhower tax program, met for two hours with the 15 GOP members of the committee, which is charged with starting all tax legislation through Congress.

Approval Is Forecast

Martin himself was cautious in discussing the tax matter with newsmen after the meeting. He said only that he was "prayerfully hopeful" the committee would agree to send the bill to the floor and predicted the tax extender would be voted "if it comes out of the committee."

One high-ranking Republican congressman who asked not to be identified by name predicted flatly the proposal will be approved with the help of Democratic votes. Others were more cautious, but agreed that inroads had been made in the once-solid GOP front on the committee.

Meanwhile Eisenhower formally submitted to Congress a six-point tax program which included a plea to keep the excess profits tax on the books for six months beyond its June 30 expiration date.

The President said he regretted the need to ask for such legislation "because I share the widespread feeling that our taxes are generally too high and that some of our tax laws are inherently defective."

"But facts are facts," Eisenhower said, "and I propose that we face them."

Reed Stands Firm

Reed said that after the meeting his opposition to extension of the excess profits tax had been changed "not a particle."

"Our first step," he said, "should be to steer the country away from the shoals of oppressive taxation and give the free enterprise system an opportunity to expand and produce income."

Eisenhower said, too, that he believes "a reduction in individual taxes must come first, for the benefit of the entire economy." He called for a reduction in personal income taxes of about 10 per cent on Jan. 1.

He laid the blame for the situation at the doorstep of the Truman administration, stating he "inherited a critically unsound state of financial affairs."

Senate Approves First Money Bill

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—The Senate passed its first regular 1954 money bill of the session today after voting floor cuts totalling about 10½ million dollars.

As finally approved, the independent offices measure carries about 446 million dollars to run 22 government commissions and agencies in the fiscal year starting July 1.

This is about six million less than the House voted and about 10½ million less than the Senate Appropriations Committee approved in sending the measure to the floor.

It is also about 726 millions less than the budget for the 22 agencies submitted by former President Truman and about 547 millions less than the same departments were voted last year.

But Democrats contended that many of the cuts claimed by the Republicans as compared with last year's appropriations and with the Truman budget were "phony" and would have to be made up later.

The Senate included in the bill authority to start 35,000 lowrent public housing units in fiscal 1954 as asked by the Eisenhower administration. The House had denied authority to start any units.

West Va. Board Grapples With Budget Dilemma

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 20 (AP)—The Board of Public Works will hold staunchly to its own 1953-55 revenue estimates when it meets with a Legislative committee tomorrow.

That was apparent from conversations with board members late today after they had spent several hours grappling with a budget dilemma handed the state by a Supreme Court ruling.

The Court, earlier this week, threw out as unconstitutional the entire 1953-55 budget enacted earlier this year by the Legislature and thus made a special session of the lawmakers mandatory sometime before July 1.

The new budget must be ready for the beginning of the new fiscal year on July 1.

The Supreme Court held, among other things, that the Legislature unlawfully increased Board of Public Works recommendations by some one and a half million dollars in finally enacting the budget law.

The lawmakers had provided, by a "legislative finding", revenue estimates amounting to one million dollars more annually than those provided by the Board of Public Works.

The board refused to revise its estimates on the Legislature's final hectic day, and there was no indication tonight it would be in a mood to make such upward changes now.

Body Of Hagerstown Mayor's Son Found

WILLIAMSPORT, Md., May 20 (AP) — The body of George Burhans, 18-year-old son of Hagerstown's Mayor Winslow F. Burhans, has been found in the Potomac River near here.

The youth disappeared in the rain-swollen river Sunday while trying to swim ashore from a capsized row boat about 15 yards from the Maryland side.

GI Sent To Jail For Wife-Beating

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP) — An AWOL military police sergeant was sentenced to 30 days in jail today for wife-beating after telling Magistrate Simon Schonfield:

"I'm a Korean veteran. It makes no difference what you do to me."

Sgt. John Romain's wife told Schonfield this was the third time her husband had been haled into court for beating her. She said he was released twice before "because he has so many ribbons."

Mrs. Romain testified that her husband came home last night "grabbed me, choked me and pulled my hair."

Court Restores Rings To Women

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP)—Two Baltimore Negro women won damages of a penny each against the city's police commissioner today, and were given back the valuable diamond rings they once thought were practically worthless.

One case involved Mrs. Margie Mason who found a solitaire surrounded by 16 small diamonds in the grass on a Pulaski Highway picnic ground in August 1950.

Mrs. Mason said she thought the ring was a pretty bauble, but not of much value so she permitted her children to use it as a plaything.

When she tried to pawn it for $10 in January 1952, she learned its real value was between $3,000 and $5,000, but police took custody.

In the other case, a seaman friend gave a ring to Mrs. Dorothy G. Jones as a present for Christmas 1949.

When she tried to pawn it for $3, police stepped in again. Its value was put at $1,500.

The women brought suit to gain possession of the rings and for damages against Police Commissioner Beverly Ober. They were awarded one cent each in damages for the temporary loss of their jewels and given possession, at least temporarily.

Judge Herman M. Moser, who made the final rulings, pointed out that the rings may be held subject to the rights of their original owners, if the owners are found.

Times Change

Paris Flight 26 Years Ago Won 'Lindy' World Acclaim

By ARTHUR EDSON

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—The weather over the Atlantic had cleared at last.

And so, early in the morning 26 years ago today, the airplane was rolled from its hangar. A crowd gathered around the young man who was preparing to crawl into the small cockpit.

"You taking only five sandwiches?" he was asked.

"Yes," he said with a grin. "That's enough. If I get to Paris I won't need any more, and if I don't get to Paris I won't need any more, either."

The young man climbed in. The heavily loaded plane—it carried 458 gallons of gasoline—roared down the runway, and at 7:52 a.m., it took unsteadily to the air. It almost struck a road scraper, and it barely cleared the telegraph wires.

The Associated Press bulletin read:

"Roosevelt Field, New York, May 20 (AP)—Charles A. Lindbergh, 'Captain' to the Missouri National Guard but 'Slim' to his buddies, set out today on an unmarked air trail for Paris.

"The Missourian, who plays a lone hand, had no one to show him the way as he hurled his Ryan Monoplane, The Spirit of St. Louis, into the muggy air over Roosevelt Field . . ."

The Spirit of St. Louis now hangs in the Smithsonian Institution, and your correspondent wandered by today to see it on the anniversary of the start of that great flight.

In this day of giant aircraft, it looks small and insignificant. In a day when jet planes regularly break the sound barriers, it looks hopelessly old fashioned and inefficient.

The statistics on the placard below the plane won't excite anyone any more. Wingspread, 46 feet. 27 feet, 3 inches long. Most economical speed, 97 miles an hour.

Twenty-six years ago the world waited and worried. Could he do it? And as the tension mounted, so did the excitement.

When The Spirit of St. Louis finally settled down on the airfield at Le Bourget near Paris, 33 hours and 28 minutes after the take-off, the scene was unbelievable.

The bewildered Lindbergh was met by 150,000 hysterical people . . . the reception committee, the guards, the steel fences, all were mowed down by the crowd. A reporter described it this way: "One of history's greatest mob scenes."

The Smithsonian placard sums up the sentiment in one sedate sentence: "Col. Lindbergh received princely acclamations in France, Belgium, and England, and returning by warship, found his native country at his feet."

Well, times change. During a 30-minute watch—"wake" might be a better word—dozens of young people walked under The Spirit of St. Louis today. Not one bothered to look up. Only four visitors stopped to read the placard. It was something of a shock to realize the same description, middle aged, could be used for all of them.

Now It Costs You To Park On Beach

OCEAN CITY, Md., May 20 (AP)—It will cost you to park on the beach here after June 1.

City Council has ordered 163 parking meters installed at the beach lot to serve a total of 314 spaces. Rates will range from 25 cents from one hour to $1 for 12 hours.

City officials say police will patrol the lot to tag violators.

Wartime Wave Chief Will Probe Turndown

NEW YORK, May 20 (AP)—Mrs. Mildred McAfee Horton, wartime commander of the Waves, said today she is going to investigate privately why her appointment as a U. S. official to the United Nations did not go through.

"I am very unhappy about the whole thing and do not want any fuss made . . .," she said at LaGuardia airport on arrival from a Cleveland lecture.

"I want privately to follow this up and find out what it is all about. I don't know, I may never get the information."

Mrs. Horton was named recently as U. S. delegate to the United Nations Economic and Social Commission. When the commission convened May 4, her place was taken by James Wadsworth, alternate U. S. delegate to the U. N.

Ike Could Improve Golf, Herlong Says

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—If President Eisenhower can improve his pitch shots, he can get his golf score under 90, says Rep. Syd Herlong (D-Fla) who was the President's partner recently.

The two teamed up to beat Sen. Malone (R-Nev) and John E. McClure, Washington lawyer, one-up in a match at the Burning Tree Golf Club.

"It was Eisenhower's putt on the last hole that did the trick," Herlong reported.

One of the better golfers in Congress, Herlong found the President a congenial golfer and a regular fellow.

Promotions Are Termed Illegal

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—Sen. Williams (R-Del) today accused the Truman administration of promoting "many thousands" of government workers illegally in its last days of power.

He demanded that the workers be demoted by the Eisenhower administration before they gain permanent status in their better jobs.

The Delaware senator said in a statement the promotions were "another last minute attempt by the Truman administration to raid the federal Treasury." He said they were on a "wholesale scale."

Many of the employes involved, Williams said, "will, if allowed to serve one year in their advanced positions without challenge, gain permanent status" in them.

He stated the promotions were made under a ruling by the Civil Service Commission last Oct. 17 that employes may be assigned higher grade duties although "not eligible for promotion of two grades" in the civil service system.

Some workers who got higher grade duties have also been given increased pay, Williams told reporters.

31 Outlaws Convicted

PALMERO, Sicily, May 20 (AP)—Thirty-one members of the once-feared outlaw band of highwayman Salvatore Giuliano were convicted today on charges ranging from theft to murder and kidnapping.

Fourteen other men on trial with them since Jan. 26 were acquitted. Two of those convicted were sentenced to life imprisonment and the others to terms ranging from two to 30 years.

Tangun, who lived in 2300 B. C., is considered the father of Korean civilization.

Refugee Chief Hopeful

VIENNA, Austria, May 20 (AP)—Dr. G. J. Van Heuven Goedhart, U. N. high commissioner for refugees, today expressed hope President Eisenhower's recent appeal to Congress may cause the United States to open its doors to more refugees.

The President last month asked Congress to re-examine the country's immigration policy "with a view to achieving legislation that would be fair and just to all."

West Va. Board Grapples With Budget Dilemma

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 20 (AP)—The Board of Public Works will hold staunchly to its own 1953-55 revenue estimates when it meets with a Legislative committee tomorrow.

That was apparent from conversations with board members late today after they had spent several hours grappling with a budget dilemma handed the state by a Supreme Court ruling.

The Court, earlier this week, threw out as unconstitutional the entire 1953-55 budget enacted earlier this year by the Legislature and thus made a special session of the lawmakers mandatory sometime before July 1.

The new budget must be ready for the beginning of the new fiscal year on July 1.

The Supreme Court held, among other things, that the Legislature unlawfully increased Board of Public Works recommendations by some one and a half million dollars in finally enacting the budget law.

The lawmakers had provided, by a "legislative finding", revenue estimates amounting to one million dollars more annually than those provided by the Board of Public Works.

The board refused to revise its estimates on the Legislature's final hectic day, and there was no indication tonight it would be in a mood to make such upward changes now.

Body Of Hagerstown Mayor's Son Found

WILLIAMSPORT, Md., May 20 (AP) — The body of George Burhans, 18-year-old son of Hagerstown's Mayor Winslow F. Burhans, has been found in the Potomac River near here.

The youth disappeared in the rain-swollen river Sunday while trying to swim ashore from a capsized row boat about 15 yards from the Maryland side.

GI Sent To Jail For Wife-Beating

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP) — An AWOL military police sergeant was sentenced to 30 days in jail today for wife-beating after telling Magistrate Simon Schonfield:

"I'm a Korean veteran. It makes no difference what you do to me."

Sgt. John Romain's wife told Schonfield this was the third time her husband had been haled into court for beating her. She said he was released twice before "because he has so many ribbons."

Mrs. Romain testified that her husband came home last night "grabbed me, choked me and pulled my hair."

Court Restores Rings To Women

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP)—Two Baltimore Negro women won damages of a penny each against the city's police commissioner today, and were given back the valuable diamond rings they once thought were practically worthless.

One case involved Mrs. Margie Mason who found a solitaire surrounded by 16 small diamonds in the grass on a Pulaski Highway picnic ground in August 1950.

Mrs. Mason said she thought the ring was a pretty bauble, but not of much value so she permitted her children to use it as a plaything.

When she tried to pawn it for $10 in January 1952, she learned its real value was between $3,000 and $5,000, but police took custody.

In the other case, a seaman friend gave a ring to Mrs. Dorothy G. Jones as a present for Christmas 1949.

When she tried to pawn it for $3, police stepped in again. Its value was put at $1,500.

The women brought suit to gain possession of the rings and for damages against Police Commissioner Beverly Ober. They were awarded one cent each in damages for the temporary loss of their jewels and given possession, at least temporarily.

Judge Herman M. Moser, who made the final rulings, pointed out that the rings may be held subject to the rights of their original owners, if the owners are found.

Times Change

Paris Flight 26 Years Ago Won 'Lindy' World Acclaim

By ARTHUR EDSON

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—The weather over the Atlantic had cleared at last.

And so, early in the morning 26 years ago today, the airplane was rolled from its hangar. A crowd gathered around the young man who was preparing to crawl into the small cockpit.

"You taking only five sandwiches?" he was asked.

"Yes," he said with a grin. "That's enough. If I get to Paris I won't need any more, and if I don't get to Paris I won't need any more, either."

The young man climbed in. The heavily loaded plane—it carried 458 gallons of gasoline—roared down the runway, and at 7:52 a.m., it took unsteadily to the air. It almost struck a road scraper, and it barely cleared the telegraph wires.

The Associated Press bulletin read:

"Roosevelt Field, New York, May 20 (AP)—Charles A. Lindbergh, 'Captain' to the Missouri National Guard but 'Slim' to his buddies, set out today on an unmarked air trail for Paris.

"The Missourian, who plays a lone hand, had no one to show him the way as he hurled his Ryan Monoplane, The Spirit of St. Louis, into the muggy air over Roosevelt Field . . ."

The Spirit of St. Louis now hangs in the Smithsonian Institution, and your correspondent wandered by today to see it on the anniversary of the start of that great flight.

In this day of giant aircraft, it looks small and insignificant. In a day when jet planes regularly break the sound barriers, it looks hopelessly old fashioned and inefficient.

The statistics on the placard below the plane won't excite anyone any more. Wingspread, 46 feet. 27 feet, 3 inches long. Most economical speed, 97 miles an hour.

Twenty-six years ago the world waited and worried. Could he do it? And as the tension mounted, so did the excitement.

When The Spirit of St. Louis finally settled down on the airfield at Le Bourget near Paris, 33 hours and 28 minutes after the take-off, the scene was unbelievable.

The bewildered Lindbergh was met by 150,000 hysterical people . . . the reception committee, the guards, the steel fences, all were mowed down by the crowd. A reporter described it this way: "One of history's greatest mob scenes."

The Smithsonian placard sums up the sentiment in one sedate sentence: "Col. Lindbergh received princely acclamations in France, Belgium, and England, and returning by warship, found his native country at his feet."

Well, times change. During a 30-minute watch—"wake" might be a better word—dozens of young people walked under The Spirit of St. Louis today. Not one bothered to look up. Only four visitors stopped to read the placard. It was something of a shock to realize the same description, middle aged, could be used for all of them.

Now It Costs You To Park On Beach

OCEAN CITY, Md., May 20 (AP)—It will cost you to park on the beach here after June 1.

City Council has ordered 163 parking meters installed at the beach lot to serve a total of 314 spaces. Rates will range from 25 cents from one hour to $1 for 12 hours.

City officials say police will patrol the lot to tag violators.

Wartime Wave Chief Will Probe Turndown

NEW YORK, May 20 (AP)—Mrs. Mildred McAfee Horton, wartime commander of the Waves, said today she is going to investigate privately why her appointment as a U. S. official to the United Nations did not go through.

"I am very unhappy about the whole thing and do not want any fuss made . . .," she said at LaGuardia airport on arrival from a Cleveland lecture.

"I want privately to follow this up and find out what it is all about. I don't know, I may never get the information."

Mrs. Horton was named recently as U. S. delegate to the United Nations Economic and Social Commission. When the commission convened May 4, her place was taken by James Wadsworth, alternate U. S. delegate to the U. N.

Ike Could Improve Golf, Herlong Says

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—If President Eisenhower can improve his pitch shots, he can get his golf score under 90, says Rep. Syd Herlong (D-Fla) who was the President's partner recently.

The two teamed up to beat Sen. Malone (R-Nev) and John E. McClure, Washington lawyer, one-up in a match at the Burning Tree Golf Club.

"It was Eisenhower's putt on the last hole that did the trick," Herlong reported.

One of the better golfers in Congress, Herlong found the President a congenial golfer and a regular fellow.

Promotions Are Termed Illegal

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—Sen. Williams (R-Del) today accused the Truman administration of promoting "many thousands" of government workers illegally in its last days of power.

He demanded that the workers be demoted by the Eisenhower administration before they gain permanent status in their better jobs.

The Delaware senator said in a statement the promotions were "another last minute attempt by the Truman administration to raid the federal Treasury." He said they were on a "wholesale scale."

Many of the employes involved, Williams said, "will, if allowed to serve one year in their advanced positions without challenge, gain permanent status" in them.

He stated the promotions were made under a ruling by the Civil Service Commission last Oct. 17 that employes may be assigned higher grade duties although "not eligible for promotion of two grades" in the civil service system.

Some workers who got higher grade duties have also been given increased pay, Williams told reporters.

31 Outlaws Convicted

PALMERO, Sicily, May 20 (AP)—Thirty-one members of the once-feared outlaw band of highwayman Salvatore Giuliano were convicted today on charges ranging from theft to murder and kidnapping.

Fourteen other men on trial with them since Jan. 26 were acquitted. Two of those convicted were sentenced to life imprisonment and the others to terms ranging from two to 30 years.

Tangun, who lived in 2300 B. C., is considered the father of Korean civilization.

Refugee Chief Hopeful

VIENNA, Austria, May 20 (AP)—Dr. G. J. Van Heuven Goedhart, U. N. high commissioner for refugees, today expressed hope President Eisenhower's recent appeal to Congress may cause the United States to open its doors to more refugees.

The President last month asked Congress to re-examine the country's immigration policy "with a view to achieving legislation that would be fair and just to all."

Age Not Tragedy, Conference Told

BALTIMORE, May 19 (AP) — The time has come, said a minister yesterday, to realize that older people "have as vital a contribution to make (to society) as a person of 25 or 30."

"Age is not a tragedy," Dr. W. Waldemar W. Argow told the Maryland State Conference of Social Welfare. "It is just as much a part of life as youth."

Dr. Argow, pastor of the First Unitarian Church here, said that it took a long time "to recognize that women were human beings," and that more people should start thinking of the aged as humans.

He remarked that "the discovery that women, like men, are capable, was as startling as the discovery of America."

Dr. Argow said that some of the difficulties now regarded as problems will disappear when the "senseless division" of people into categories—men and women, black and white, old and young, Catholic, Jew and Protestant—is stopped.

Another speaker, Dr. Herman Seidel, said that aged people should not be lumped together in one category. "There are normal aged people and sick aged people," he said. "A healthy, normal aged person is as efficient as a healthy, normal person of 50."

Dr. Seidel is a physician specializing in care of the aged. He recommended the breaking down of fixed age limits in industry and volunteer work and said the aged should be considered strictly as individuals.

Lie Receives $20,000 Terminal Pay From UN

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., May 20 (AP)—Ex-Secretary General Trygve Lie received $20,000 terminal pay from the United Nations in a final settlement ending his seven years with the U. N., officials said today.

Dag Hammarskjold, Lie's successor, authorized the payment.

Lie did not take part in the staff pension fund but the U. N. Assembly decided when he was hired in 1946 that he would be granted a pension of $10,000 a year for life. This will take effect July 10.

During his time as secretary general Lie drew $20,000 per year salary, plus $20,000 expense for entertainment. He also received the use of the mansion in Forest Hills, complete with staff, and was furnished a car with a chauffeur.

Berkeley Co. Voters Approve $975,000 School Bond Issue

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., May 20 (AP) — Berkeley County voters have overwhelmingly approved their first bond issue for school construction in 25 years.

Complete, but unofficial, returns were 3,772 to 401 in favor of the $975,000 issue. A 60 per cent margin was necessary for approval, and this was about 91 per cent.

About one-third of the registered voters turned out.

The bonds, to be paid off over 20 years at not more than three per cent interest, will finance a 12-room junior high school here, a four-room addition to Hedgesville elementary school, and physical education facilities at Musselman and Ramer High Schools.

School Superintendent James L. Creasey had said the program would make it possible to bring some 400 first grade pupils out of basement rooms, permit expansion of all elementary grades which are now crowded, create a junior high school with seventh and eighth grades, and provide needed gymnasium facilities at Musselman and Ramer.

The Ultimate Problem

President Eisenhower doesn't believe "at this moment" (press conference of May 14) that the Chinese Communists "should" be admitted into the United Nations as the Government of China if and when an armistice is concluded in Korea.

Yet the regime at Peking has avowed again and again that it must be accepted by UN if peaceful relations are ever to be established between East and West. Chester Bowles, retiring U. S. ambassador to India, told a National Press Club luncheon at Washington on May 13 that once the Reds agree to a real settlement in Korea, Indo-China, and the Far East in general, the "rest of the world" would almost unanimously demand their admittance to UN, notwithstanding U. S. sentiment to the contrary.

A way out of the impasse may ultimately be found in the structure of the United Nations. Although the UN charter allows the veto to be applied to prevent a new state from becoming a UN member, the veto power may not be applicable in deciding which government represents a state, like China, already a member.

At least, Secretary of State Acheson intimated at a press conference on May 16, 1951, that this issue may have to be decided by the World Court. If the World Court should rule against the veto power, the road to a solution would be opened up.

The UN could accept the regime at Peking as the government to represent China, even though the United States voted "No." The UN decision would not require the United States to recognize the Chinese Reds in its own diplomatic relations, indeed would not prevent it from continuing to recognize the Nationalist government on Formosa. Americans would undoubtedly regard this as a highly unsatisfactory settlement.

The "Wetback" Problem

Congress is beginning debate on the "wetbacks"—an issue that seems destined to return year after year until it is settled right. The present proposal to extend the existing unsatisfactory arrangement indefinitely isn't likely to succeed in sweeping the dirt under the rug.

"Wetbacks" are Mexicans who enter the United States illegally. Most of them enter Texas and either get jobs there or drift to nearby states. They are hired as seasonal agricultural labor at rates lower than the minimum paid citizen migrant laborers, thus jeopardizing their meager living. Their employers hold them in virtual serfdom during the picking season: unless they "co-operate," they are reported to immigration authorities for deportation. Once the season ends, the authorities suddenly discover their illegal presence and ship them back to Mexico in droves.

This is an ugly situation. It costs the taxpayers a considerable amount of money and the cost is in effect a subsidy to law-breaking Southwestern farmers. It takes money from the pockets of American farm migrants—the "Okies." But Congress has not taken effective steps to end the evil.

One thing that makes control of the "wetbacks" difficult is the legalized importation of a relatively small number of Mexican farm laborers who work at legal rates. There is no real need for this labor at present; there are Americans who need the jobs; but it is this arrangement which would be continued indefinitely under the present bill.

Mrs. Roosevelt Off Again

Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, now 68, has taken to the road again. She is to make a series of talks in Japan, visit Hong Kong ("because my husband's parents had lived there for many years"), take in Turkey, inspect Yugoslavia (at the invitation of Marshal Tito). Mrs. R's two-and-a-half-months trip is under the auspices of an interracial organization for bettering relations between this country and Asia.

People like Mrs. Roosevelt, complained recently a Communist leader in India, where she spent four weeks in the spring of 1952, make it harder for Asians to fall for hate-America propaganda. While she was in India, she was denounced by the Moscow radio as an "enemy of peace and democracy," also as a promoter of an international police force to keep "the people" from freedom.

Mrs. Roosevelt has engaged in probably more public activity since the death of her husband than did all other Presidential widows combined. Mrs. Coolidge's continued interest in music was that of a private citizen, and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. Taft, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Harding, all kept out of the limelight.

Mrs. Roosevelt's international gregariousness could never have been foreseen from her childhood. Orphaned at 10, educated by tutors and in private schools (unlike Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Hoover, she never went to college), and painfully diffident in her teens, she was brought up in social circles in which, as she notes in her autobiography, "you conformed."

New Military Team

The new military lineup which will steer the nation's military policies is now complete. With the appointment of Admiral Arthur W. Radford as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and the nomination of General Matthew B. Ridgway and of Admiral Robert B. Carney to membership in the Joint Chiefs organization, the administration's policy of applying new talents to top military jobs has been put into effect. General Nathan F. Twining's appointment to the Joint Chiefs had been announced previously.

There had been rumors that President Eisenhower wanted Gen. Carl Spaatz to take over the chairmanship being vacated by General Bradley. But during his Korean tour in December, Mr. Eisenhower spent more time conferring with Admiral Radford than with any other top officer.

The surprise in the reshuffle is the removal of Admiral William W. Fechteler, present member of the Joint Chiefs and chief of naval operations. Admiral Fechteler's term as a member of the Joint Chiefs had two years to run. Whether he asked to be relieved, or whether the "pleasure of the President" philosophy was invoked, isn't clear.

With Generals Ridgway and Twining and Admirals Radford and Carney in the top posts, the possibility becomes brighter of placing the military planning aspects of Defense Department machinery on a smoother working basis.

How To Keep Well

Gall Bladder Folklore

It has been said that after the age of 40 the gall bladder of half our population shows evidence of disease; that gallstones are present in more than one-fifth. On the other hand, only a small proportion are bothered and the majority go through life without being conscious of the organ's existence.

Gallbladder disease is surrounded by folklore, fallacies, and old wives' tales. We received a letter recently from a middle aged woman who was thoroughly confused by the conflicting over the back fence information she had received. There was no doubt about the state of her gall bladder; she had suffered many attacks of colic and X-rays were in keeping with her difficulties. One neighbor told her that unless the organ was removed she was bound to develop cancer; another warned her not to "let them operate because people without a gall bladder always develop cancer."

Cancer of the gall bladder is not common but statistics show that it is more prevalent in persons with gallstones. In this respect, removal of the sac will lessen the possibility of malignancy. The idea presented by the second neighbor is tommy-rot. There is no reason why gall bladder surgery should make any one more susceptible to cancer; if anything it decreases the possibility by eliminating a source of infection and irritation.

Disturbances of the gall bladder begin in early adult life and tend to appear at an earlier age in women, more so in those who have borne children. Later in life, the incidence in both sexes is about the same. The number of gallstones varies; the record is reported to be 7,802. These concretions also vary in size and the largest weighed a shade under ¼ pound.

Physicians disagree on whether a single large stone produces as much discomfort as multiple small ones. It is argued that the little fellows are more likely to attempt to escape and the ensuing blockage of the passageway leads to painful colic. This is true but it is surprising how often major complications are encountered by those harboring a single large stone. Apparently the big boys make the gall sac more susceptible so that when trouble begins the structure cannot cope with the additional burden.

There was a well known association between the gall bladder and the heart. Some persons have been relieved of angina pectoris and other cardiac symptoms, and the electrocardiogram has returned to normal, after removal of an infected gall bladder filled with stones. Such instances are the exception rather than the rule but serve to explain why physicians occasionally suggest X-ray of the gall bladders even though symptoms point to heart disease.

SHE'S STARVED

M. L. writes: Unless I eat no more than 500 calories a day I become overweight. I'm 21 years old and my glands are healthy, according to the many different doctors I have seen. Life on such a starvation diet is hardly worth while. Have you any suggestions?

REPLY

Stop looking for an excuse to eat more. As soon as you regain your figure, I'm sure your diet can be modified to maintain a respectable weight.

HEARING LOSS

F. W. writes: I took streptomycin at a tuberculosis hospital for six months and became deaf in one ear. Will hearing return now that I have stopped taking the medication?

REPLY

It may, if the auditory nerve has not degenerated completely.

BODY BUILD PATTERNS

L. A. writes: Could you give me the explanation of this odd figure of a woman: heavy legs, broad hips, and no development above the waist?

REPLY

Deranged glands may be responsible but what particular combination of dysfunctions is present in the figure you describe lacks scientific explanation. This woman is not unique, however; many of her sisters are built this way.

UNTRUE

Mrs. J. wriets: I have been told that when children are given antibiotics such as penicillin or aureomycin, leukemia develops. How true is this?

REPLY

This story is not accurate. Blood disturbances may follow the use of antibiotics but leukemia is not one of these disorders.

SORE THROAT

Mrs. L. writes: My youngster's tonsils were removed last year because she suffered from frequent sore throats but she still gets periodic sore throats. Can you explain?

REPLY

Removal of the tonsils is not a guarantee against colds. The procedure helps most when the tonsils are acting as a focus of infection; tonsilectomy eliminates this source of bacteria.

INFECTION FOLLOWING BRUISE

L. W. writes: Could a bone bruise cause osteomyelitis?

REPLY

Yes. Now and then the infection (osteomyelitis) follows injuries so slight they cannot even be remembered.

British-American Relations Shifting Dangerously; Radford Appointment Hints Of Asia-First Policy; Attorney General Likes Rustic Retreat.

WASHINGTON—It may not be pleasant to talk about, but at no time in years have our relations with our ancient allies in Europe been on such thin ice.

Behind the senatorial blasts of Joe McCarthy et al—which are bad enough — relations with our old friend and mother country, England, are in deplorable shape. Not much better are our relations with France.

Here are some of the background factors which have strained relations to the point where we are not only bitterly disliked in many British circles, but where British officialdom has almost given up the idea of working with us and seriously contemplate closer ties on the continent and even behind the iron curtain!

1. Churchill's desire for a Big Three meeting lies squarely across the Dulles-Eisenhower belief that there must be no such meeting until the Russians show some indication that they are ready for genuine co-operation.

2. The appointment of redheaded Adm. Arthur Radford as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is the signal that the U. S. A. from now on will follow an Asia-first policy.

3. The shortsighted sleight of hand by Secretary of Defense Wilson in juggling the low British bid for generators for the Chief Joseph Dam has the British boiling. Admittedly, under U. S. law, the Defense Department was obligated to accept the bid. However, Wilson finagled new bids in order to cut the British out.

4. Chancellor of the Exchequer Butler charges that we have forced England to curtail trade with China and satellite countries and simultaneously blocked British trade with the United States. We can't have our cake and eat it too, the British say. They also allege that the Eisenhower slogan of "trade-not-aid" is a complete phony.

5. If the Eisenhower administration doesn't let down the trade barriers, the Churchill government is ready to re-establish heavy trading with Red China and iron curtain countries.

Ike And Winnie

The important thing to remember is that this impasse has taken place not with the Labor Government of England, but with the British Conservatives led by a prime minister whose mother was American and whose chief policy in the past has been co-operation with the United States. In fact, Churchill took a special trip to the United States to visit Eisenhower before the inauguration in order to cement a friendship which some felt had lagged under Truman.

Furthermore, Eisenhower himself was considered the best wartime friend England had, and his Guildhall speech in London has been hailed as a milestone cementing American-British relations.

Tragety is that Ike himself, though realizing the dangerous drift between the two allies, seems unable to do anything about it. His desire to "get along with Congress" is now uppermost on his agenda of objectives. In fact, some friends say he seems hypnotized by that goal.

Of the various snags in the path of British-American relations, you will probably hear less about the appointment of Admiral Radford as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Yet it rankles deep with the British.

They are too diplomatic to talk about a domestic American appointment; nevertheless, they recall all too well how Radford has advocated virtual war with China, and how he sold Eisenhower a promising but phony bill of goods regarding the power of Chiang Kai-shek's Formosan army only to have it turn out to be a dud.

Europe vs. Asia

Radford's appointment revives the World War II row between MacArthur and Eisenhower as to which theater of war, the Pacific or the European, should come first.

Eisenhower at that time wanted more men, more materiel for Europe. His old boss, Douglas MacArthur, wanted more for the Pacific. The Navy generally sided with MacArthur. But Eisenhower had two powerful friends who in real fact were calling the shots for the total war—Roosevelt and Churchill. They decreed that the European theater should come first, and that was why V-E Day came ahead of V-J Day.

Today, Eisenhower is in a position where he can call the shots as Roosevelt and Churchill did. However, if he is calling them—and it looks as if he is not—he has in effect put Asia, not Europe, first. He has done this at a time when the United States lacks the munitions to spread itself over two continents at one time. And in doing so, he has let the China lobby, the Admiral Radford wing of the Navy and the extreme Asia-first wing of the Republican party actually dictate our foreign policy.

Brownell Likes Shangri-La

Attorney General Brownell has sent a private note to President Eisenhower urging him "to commute the death sentence" on Shangri La, the Presidential retreat in the Maryland hills. Ike was about to abandon Shangri La along with the Presidential yacht Williamsburg as an economy move. However, his attorney general has been using it as a weekend hideout to catch up on his work away from the clutter and clatter of his office.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The Curse Of Titoism

Since the Yugoslav Communist, Tito, broke with Stalin, some of the statesmen of the Western world, including not a few in our own State Department, have been seeking an imitation Tito in each of the Communist countries. Thus far, they have failed to find any. Tito is apparently a special case among Communists. Nationalistic Communists, such as Dimitrov in Bulgaria or Earl Browder in the United States, were eliminated for their divergencies.

Tito is as much a Marxist today as he was when, as a member of the Comintern, he was chosen to head Stalin's forces in Yugoslavia. He has never renounced Marxism. He has only established national communism in his own country, rejecting a subordinate position to Stalin in the leadership of the world revolution. Why Titoism is superior to Stalinism is not understandable on any ideological basis; it is only understandable in the outright opportunism which has been characteristic of the British foreign policy from Chamberlain's appeasement of Hitler at Munich to Churchill's appeasement of Mao Tze-tung in China or of Malenkov in his latest speech in Parliament.

Our State Department, under Dean Acheson, generally was a mirror of British policy. Therefore, while Acheson paid lip service to anti-communism in China, he served the cause of British trade too ardently to hold an independent view for the United States. John Foster Dulles, who has tried to build an American foreign policy, has encountered so much opposition within our own government that his earlier pronouncements, as well as those of President Eisenhower, have melted away as though in thin air.

This country is now back to the opportunism of looking for Titos and bribing them to serve our temporary purposes. Yet, the Republicans always denounced the expedients of overly-clever men who lived by tricks rather than by principles of action. They are the authors of most of our present misfortunes.

One of the Titos that these statesmen, British and American, would manufacture is Mao Tze-tung, the current Kremlin satrap in China. Following the advice of Nehru of India is always dangerous because Nehru is a broker whose profits can only come from trouble among the Western countries. When he advises that the United States recognize Mao Tze-tung, he is tricking us into a dangerous situation. His motive is to achieve the leadership of Asia for India—a laudable motive for his country but not in our interest.

Senator William Knowland, who is undoubtedly the best-informed member of the Senate on Asiatic questions, recently said in a speech:

"While I recognize there is room for an honest difference of opinion, it is my own belief that the acceptance of the Communist proposal to have prisoners of war turned over to a commission representing India, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Sweden, and Switzerland is a great mistake, and one that may be hard to justify in the years to come.

"All five of these nations have recognized Communist China.

"Two of these nations, Poland and Czechoslovakia, are Communist satellites, and consistently follow Soviet policy.

"The fifth nation, India, has more than 80 per cent of the time, since the Korean War broke out, voted with the Communist side or abstained."

What India wants the United States to do is to accept willy-nilly the Russian terms as presented at Panmunjom. This will seal our defeat in the Korean War and will please India no end because of the Indians' intense hatred for the Anglo-Saxon countries. The defeat of the United States would be a victory not only for Mao but for Nehru as well.

Such a concession on our part, such an appeasement, will not make a Tito out of Mao Tze-tung. He has been in the International Communist Movement since about 1920 when he was a student at the Peking National University. He has been thoroughly trained in Kremlin thinking and in Kremlin techniques. It would take an intellectual and spiritual cataclysm for Mao Tze-tung to break with his entire life as an adult. Nothing in the known facts of the Chinese situation would indicate that such a cataclysm has occurred or is in the offing.

To substitute the imagined for the known; to accept the hope for the reality; to reject available data for inspired improvisations is not statesmanship; it is amateurs playing with the lives of citizens.

Matter Of Fact

By JOSEPH And STEWART ALSOP

Evolution Of like

WASHINGTON

Probably the most interesting feature of the President's radio talk on the budget is its status as a new departure. Other appeals to the people and appearances before the people will follow shortly. After a further appearance on television this week, there will be a swing westward, to Minnesota, North Dakota and elsewhere; and then will come an eastern trip, beginning with the Dartmouth commencement.

Those who are qualified to report on the development of Eisenhower's thinking, emphatically say that a larger purpose lies behind all these orations and excursions. Eisenhower wants to be a strong President. He is coming to realize that the source of Presidential strength is the whole people of the United States. He now sees that he must mobilize his popular support, in order to exercise full authority in congress and in his party.

This represents a change that is subtle, yet radical. There is nothing new in Eisenhower's desire not to be remembered as one of the large, unhappy company of weak Presidents. But his ideas about how to be a strong President are plainly evolving.

When he took office, his concept of the Presidency was much more passive and much less political. Confucius all but summed up the Eisenhower concept, in a famous but slightly optimistic remark, "Let the ruler desire good, and the people will be good." The numerous inquests on Eisenhower's first hundred days sounded a bit like variations on ancient Confucianist theme, that the Son of Heaven did not need to "decide," or to "act," or even to "move," but only to "radiate benevolence."

Popular Support Increased

No one is better at radiating benevolence than Dwight D. Eisenhower. His radiations have not exactly "set in order all under heaven," as the Confucianist used to promise rather more than 2,000 years ago. Harmony with Congress has if anything diminished the President's power in Congress. Harmony in the Republican party has encouraged the anti-Eisenhower faction in the hope of taking over. In dealing with other politicians, amiability has not proven to be a universal panecea.

On the other hand, the Presidential radiations have notably increased Eisenhower's already enormous popular support. The polls attest it. The President himself had the fact forcibly called to his attention on his short visit to New York, when crowds lined the evening streets waiting to see him pass, almost in the manner of crowds in the high excitement of campaign time. The good will of the people of the United States can be called into play to overcome opposition, whenever Eisenhower chooses to exploit this supreme Presidential prerogative.

It is hard to say just when or how the decision that this would be needful began to take shape in the President's mind. With respect to dealing with Congress, the White House staff has been divided for a considerable period. The policy of harmony at almost any cost, including the cost of very grave concessions, has strong proponents such as the President's congressional liaison, Maj. Gen. Wiltbon B. Persons. But other members of the staff have challenged this policy more and more strongly and sharply.

Want Popular Support

More generally, the leading members of the cabinet, the chieftains of the Eisenhower faction in the Republican party, and a fair number of the President's trusted private friends, have long been urging the President to talk more freely to the country. They have argued that good will was not enough—that there must be strong, plain spoken popular support for specific Eisenhower policies. This, they have said, could only be secured by "going to the people," by "taking has case to the voters."

Certain incidents have also played their role in Eisenhower's evolution. One was the tremendous New York turn-out, which moved him very deeply. Another, of a very different sort, was the bad quarter-hour at the White House three weeks ago, when the $8,500,000,000 budget cut was first presented to the congressional leaders. The leaders' complaint about the inadequacy of the cuts, and particularly the downright angry reaction of Sen. Robert A. Taft, seemed to have suggested to the President that collaboration alone would not make him master in his own house.

If you think about it, the step is long from persuading politicians persuading the people, so that the people can persuade the politicians by the old familiar method of applying the heart to their backsides.

If this step is taken successfully, the significance will be very great indeed. The Eisenhower administration will be purged of its worst weakness, which has been a curious failure to realize its own power. The President will begin really to lead, instead of allowing himself to be led by those who tell him what the "country will and won't stand for." And in the immediate future, the senators and representatives who are preparing to defy Eisenhower on such issues as reciprocal trade, foreign aid, and the budget in general, will find the going very hard indeed.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON—President Eisenhower has taken his first major political risk—he has failed to reduce taxes as was promised in his political campaign. The conclusion he announced to a nation-wide radio audience was that tax reduction will be possible six months hence—but not now. Yet his main argument for not doing so at this time is that the national security prevents such a step.

Nowhere in the address, however, does the President tell why the world situation is going to be so vastly improved by next January that tax reductions will be recommended by him at that time.

For the message says, on the one hand, that America is living "in an age of peril" and that large defense expenditures must go on "for a long—and indefinite—period of time," and then the President indicates how in a matter of six months "a completely revised program of taxation" will be recommended by him to Congress.

Incentives Declined

Mr. Eisenhower concedes that "for the long term, present taxes are too high" and that they are "becoming a real threat to individual initiative," but he fails to note that the point of diminishing returns for the present system of tax rates has already been reached and that revenues are declining. He charitably forgives the preceding administration for overestimating receipts but does not explain why tax receipts are falling off. The real explanation is that the system of incentives has broken down. Britain and Canada, in the face of serious problems like those faced by the United States, have reduced taxes in order to increase incentives and stimulate business operations so that receipts will increase.

The political implications for the Eisenhower administration are awkward, to say the least. The President is opposed to the repeal now of the excess-profits tax, which the Democratic administration declared by law should end June 30 of this year. Even the reduction of 11 per cent, which Mr. Eisenhower agrees shall be granted in personal income-tax rates effective in January of next year, was put on the statute books by the Democratic Congress and President Truman.

What the Eisenhower administration has done is to ask that the excess-profits tax be continued for six months because of the expectation that this will yield $800,000,000. Yet everybody knows that the excess-profits tax is an uneven and unfair tax and permits big businesses to pay a lower rate of taxes than smaller businesses. This is a favoritism for big business which is politically indefensible.

It seems incredible, after all the talk about the importance of aiding small business, that the Eisenhower administration should have been unable to find $800,000,000 either in other tax rates or in economies so as to be able to remove a vicious measure like the excess-profits-tax law.

Does the administration believe that business operations in America are going to be aided now and that planning is going to be assisted by affirming the excess-profits-tax law? Will not business be confronted with the prospect that maybe in January the administration will again break faith and ask for another six-month extension?

It looks very much as if the administration, finding itself unable to become familiar with budget-cutting possibilities after only four months in office, became apprehensive about changing the tax laws at all this calendar year and, in effect, asked for six months' grace in which to make up its mind what to do.

Better Program Needed

The constitutional duty of Congress is to write the tax laws—as many a President has discovered before. If the Republicans, who control both houses, can't come up with a better tax program than is contained in the Eisenhower message, they will have two strikes against them in the 1954 congressional elections—and, so far as the start of campaigning in primaries is concerned, this means less than 12 months in which to do the job.

What the Eisenhower administration has failed to do also is to realize that America cannot arm the world and call it "national defense," and that our allies in Europe close to Russia are much more willing to assume the risks of a reduction in armament than America is.

Since Britain, moreover, is ready to take Communist China unto its bosom and Churchill is ready to fly to Moscow to make a deal with Malenkov, the least an American administration might have done was to revise drastically its requirement for the defense of both Europe and Asia. Foreign policy is still lacking in basic principle in determining the real extent of America's obligations to allies who have shifted the burden of their defense to the American people. That may be the big issue in the 1954 elections inside both parties.

The Ultimate Problem

President Eisenhower doesn't believe "at this moment" (press conference of May 14) that the Chinese Communists "should" be admitted into the United Nations as the Government of China if and when an armistice is concluded in Korea.

Yet the regime at Peking has avowed again and again that it must be accepted by UN if peaceful relations are ever to be established between East and West. Chester Bowles, retiring U. S. ambassador to India, told a National Press Club luncheon at Washington on May 13 that once the Reds agree to a real settlement in Korea, Indo-China, and the Far East in general, the "rest of the world" would almost unanimously demand their admittance to UN, notwithstanding U. S. sentiment to the contrary.

A way out of the impasse may ultimately be found in the structure of the United Nations. Although the UN charter allows the veto to be applied to prevent a new state from becoming a UN member, the veto power may not be applicable in deciding which government represents a state, like China, already a member.

At least, Secretary of State Acheson intimated at a press conference on May 16, 1951, that this issue may have to be decided by the World Court. If the World Court should rule against the veto power, the road to a solution would be opened up.

The UN could accept the regime at Peking as the government to represent China, even though the United States voted "No." The UN decision would not require the United States to recognize the Chinese Reds in its own diplomatic relations, indeed would not prevent it from continuing to recognize the Nationalist government on Formosa. Americans would undoubtedly regard this as a highly unsatisfactory settlement.

The "Wetback" Problem

Congress is beginning debate on the "wetbacks"—an issue that seems destined to return year after year until it is settled right. The present proposal to extend the existing unsatisfactory arrangement indefinitely isn't likely to succeed in sweeping the dirt under the rug.

"Wetbacks" are Mexicans who enter the United States illegally. Most of them enter Texas and either get jobs there or drift to nearby states. They are hired as seasonal agricultural labor at rates lower than the minimum paid citizen migrant laborers, thus jeopardizing their meager living. Their employers hold them in virtual serfdom during the picking season; unless they "co-operate," they are reported to immigration authorities for deportation. Once the season ends, the authorities suddenly discover their illegal presence and ship them back to Mexico in droves.

This is an ugly situation. It costs the taxpayers a considerable amount of money and the cost is in effect a subsidy to law-breaking Southwestern farmers. It takes money from the pockets of American farm migrants—the "Okies." But Congress has not taken effective steps to end the evil.

One thing that makes control of the "wetbacks" difficult is the legalized importation of a relatively small number of Mexican farm laborers who work at legal rates. There is no real need for this labor at present; there are Americans who need the jobs; but it is this arrangement which would be continued indefinitely under the present bill.

Mrs. Roosevelt Off Again

Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, now 68, has taken to the road again. She is to make a series of talks in Japan, visit Hong Kong ("because my husband's parents had lived there for many years"), take in Turkey, inspect Yugoslavia (at the invitation of Marshal Tito). Mrs. R's two-and-a-half-months trip is under the auspices of an interracial organization for bettering relations between this country and Asia.

People like Mrs. Roosevelt, complained recently a Communist leader in India, where she spent four weeks in the spring of 1952, make it harder for Asians to fall for hate-America propaganda. While she was in India, she was denounced by the Moscow radio as an "enemy of peace and democracy," also as a promoter of an international police force to keep "the people" from freedom.

Mrs. Roosevelt has engaged in probably more public activity since the death of her husband than did all other Presidential widows combined. Mrs. Coolidge's continued interest in music was that of a private citizen, and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. Taft, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Harding, all kept out of the limelight.

Mrs. Roosevelt's international gregariousness could never have been foreseen from her childhood. Orphaned at 10, educated by tutors and in private schools (unlike Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Hoover, she never went to college), and painfully diffident in her teens, she was brought up in social circles in which, as she notes in her autobiography, "you conformed."

New Military Team

The new military lineup which will steer the nation's military policies is now complete. With the appointment of Admiral Arthur W. Radford as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and the nomination of General Matthew B. Ridgway and of Admiral Robert B. Carney to membership in the Joint Chiefs organization, the administration's policy of applying new talents to top military jobs has been put into effect. General Nathan F. Twining's appointment to the Joint Chiefs had been announced previously.

There had been rumors that President Eisenhower wanted Gen. Carl Spaatz to take over the chairmanship being vacated by General Bradley. But during his Korean tour in December, Mr. Eisenhower spent more time conferring with Admiral Radford than with any other top officer.

The surprise in the reshuffle is the removal of Admiral William W. Fechteler, present member of the Joint Chiefs and chief of naval operations. Admiral Fechteler's term as a member of the Joint Chiefs had two years to run. Whether he asked to be relieved, or whether the "pleasure of the President" philosophy was invoked, isn't clear.

With Generals Ridgway and Twining and Admirals Radford and Carney in the top posts, the possibility becomes brighter of placing the military planning aspects of Defense Department machinery on a smoother working basis.

How To Keep Well

Gall Bladder Folklore

It has been said that after the age of 40 the gall bladder of half our population shows evidence of disease; that gallstones are present in more than one-fifth. On the other hand, only a small proportion are bothered and the majority go through life without being conscious of the organ's existence.

Gallbladder disease is surrounded by folklore, fallacies, and old wives' tales. We received a letter recently from a middle aged woman who was thoroughly confused by the conflicting over the back fence information she had received. There was no doubt about the state of her gall bladder; she had suffered many attacks of colic and X-rays were in keeping with her difficulties. One neighbor told her that unless the organ was removed she was bound to develop cancer; another warned her not to "let them operate because people without a gall bladder always develop cancer."

Cancer of the gall bladder is not common but statistics show that it is more prevalent in persons with gallstones. In this respect, removal of the sac will lessen the possibility of malignancy. The idea presented by the second neighbor is tommyrot. There is no reason why gall bladder surgery should make any one more susceptible to cancer; if anything it decreases the possibility by eliminating a source of infection and irritation.

Disturbances of the gall bladder begin in early adult life and tend to appear at an earlier age in women, more so in those who have borne children. Later in life, the incidence in both sexes is about the same. The number of gallstones varies; the record is reported to be 7,802. These concretions also vary in size and the largest weighed a shade under ¼ pound.

Physicians disagree on whether a single large stone produces as much discomfort as multiple small ones. It is argued that the little fellows are more likely to attempt to escape and the ensuing blockage of the passageway leads to painful colic. This is true but it is surprising how often major complications are encountered by those harboring a single large stone. Apparently the big boys make the gall sac more susceptible so that when trouble begins the structure cannot cope with the additional burden.

There was a well known association between the gall bladder and the heart. Some persons have been relieved of angina pectoris and other cardiac symptoms, and the electrocardiogram has returned to normal, after removal of an infected gall bladder filled with stones. Such instances are the exception rather than the rule but serve to explain why physicians occasionally suggest X-ray of the gall bladders even though symptoms point to heart disease.

SHE'S STARVED

M. L. writes: Unless I eat no more than 500 calories a day I become overweight. I'm 21 years old and my glands are healthy, according to the many different doctors I have seen. Life on such a starvation diet is hardly worth while. Have you any suggestions?

REPLY

Stop looking for an excuse to eat more. As soon as you regain your figure, I'm sure your diet can be modified to maintain a respectable weight.

HEARING LOSS

F. W. writes: I took streptomycin at a tuberculosis hospital for six months and became deaf in one ear. Will hearing return now that I have stopped taking the medication?

REPLY

It may, if the auditory nerve has not degenerated completely.

BODY BUILD PATTERNS

L. A. writes: Could you give me the explanation of this odd figure of a woman: heavy legs, broad hips, and no development above the waist?.

REPLY

Deranged glands may be responsible but what particular combination of dysfunctions is present in the figure you describe lacks scientific explanation. This woman is not unique, however; many of her sisters are built this way.

UNTRUE

Mrs. J. wriets: I have been told that when children are given antibiotics such as penicillin or aureomycin, leukemia develops. How true is this?

REPLY

This story is not accurate. Blood disturbances may follow the use of antibiotics but leukemia is not one of these disorders.

SORE THROAT

Mrs. L. writes: My youngster's tonsils were removed last year because she suffered from frequent sore throats but she still gets periodic sore throats. Can you explain?

REPLY

Removal of the tonsils is not a guarantee against colds. The procedure helps most when the tonsils are acting as a focus of infection; tonsilectomy eliminates this source of bacteria.

INFECTION FOLLOWING BRUISE

L. W. writes: Could a bone bruise cause osteomyelitis?

REPLY

Yes. Now and then the infection (osteomyelitis) follows injuries so slight they cannot even be remembered.

British-American Relations Shifting Dangerously; Radford Appointment Hints Of Asia-First Policy; Attorney General Likes Rustic Retreat.

WASHINGTON—It may not be pleasant to talk about, but at no time in years have our relations with our ancient allies in Europe been on such thin ice.

Behind the senatorial blasts of Joe McCarthy et al—which are bad enough — relations with our old friend and mother country, England, are in deplorable shape. Not much better are our relations with France.

Here are some of the background factors which have strained relations to the point where we are not only bitterly disliked in many British circles, but where British officialdom has almost given up the idea of working with us and seriously contemplate closer ties on the continent and even behind the iron curtain!

1. Churchill's desire for a Big Three meeting lies squarely across the Dulles-Eisenhower belief that there must be no such meeting until the Russians show some indication that they are ready for genuine co-operation.

2. The appointment of redheaded Adm. Arthur Radford as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is the signal that the U. S. A. from now on will follow an Asia-first policy.

3. The shortsighted sleight of hand by Secretary of Defense Wilson in juggling the low British bid for generators for the Chief Joseph Dam has the British boiling. Admittedly, under U. S. law, the Defense Department was obligated to accept the bid. However, Wilson finagled new bids in order to cut the British out.

4. Chancellor of the Exchequer Butler charges that we have forced England to curtail trade with China and satellite countries and simultaneously blocked British trade with the United States. We can't have our cake and eat it too, the British say. They also allege that the Eisenhower slogan of "trade-not-aid" is a complete phony.

5. If the Eisenhower administration doesn't let down the trade barriers, the Churchill government is ready to re-establish heavy trading with Red China and iron curtain countries.

Ike And Winnie

The important thing to remember is that this impasse has taken place not with the Labor Government of England, but with the British Conservatives led by a prime minister whose mother was American and whose chief policy in the past has been co-operation with the United States. In fact, Churchill took a special trip to the United States to visit Eisenhower before the inauguration in order to cement a friendship which some felt had lagged under Truman.

Furthermore, Eisenhower himself was considered the best wartime friend England had, and his Guildhall speech in London has been hailed as a milestone cementing American-British relations.

Tragety is that Ike himself, though realizing the dangerous drift between the two allies, seems unable to do anything about it. His desire to "get along with Congress" is now uppermost on his agenda of objectives. In fact, some friends say he seems hypnotized by that goal.

Of the various snags in the path of British-American relations, you will probably hear less about the appointment of Admiral Radford as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Yet it rankles deep with the British.

They are too diplomatic to talk about a domestic American appointment; nevertheless, they recall all too well how Radford has advocated virtual war with China, and how he sold Eisenhower a promising but phony bill of goods regarding the power of Chiang Kai-shek's Formosan army only to have it turn out to be a dud.

Europe vs. Asia

Radford's appointment revives the World War II row between MacArthur and Eisenhower as to which theater of war, the Pacific or the European, should come first.

Eisenhower at that time wanted more men, more materiel for Europe. His old boss, Douglas MacArthur, wanted more for the Pacific. The Navy generally sided with MacArthur. But Eisenhower had two powerful friends who in real fact were calling the shots for the total war—Roosevelt and Churchill. They decreed that the European theater should come first, and that was why V-E Day came ahead of V-J Day.

Today, Eisenhower is in a position where he can call the shots as Roosevelt and Churchill did. However, if he is calling them—and it looks as if he is not—he has in effect put Asia, not Europe, first. He has done this at a time when the United States lacks the munitions to spread itself over two continents at one time. And in doing so, he has let the China lobby, the Admiral Radford wing of the Navy and the extreme Asia-first wing of the Republican party actually dictate our foreign policy.

Brownell Likes Shangri-La

Attorney General Brownell has sent a private note to President Eisenhower urging him "to commute the death sentence" on Shangri La, the Presidential retreat in the Maryland hills. Ike was about to abandon Shangri La along with the Presidential yacht Williamsburg as an economy move. However, his attorney general has been using it as a weekend hideout to catch up on his work away from the clutter and clatter of his office.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The Curse Of Titoism

Since the Yugoslav Communist, Tito, broke with Stalin, some of the statesmen of the Western world, including not a few in our own State Department, have been seeking an imitation Tito in each of the Communist countries. Thus far, they have failed to find any. Tito is apparently a special case among Communists. Nationalistic Communists, such as Dimitrov in Bulgaria or Earl Browder in the United States, were eliminated for their divergencies.

Tito is as much a Marxist today as he was when, as a member of the Comintern, he was chosen to head Stalin's forces in Yugoslavia. He has never renounced Marxism. He has only established national communism in his own country, rejecting a subordinate position to Stalin in the leadership of the world revolution. Why Titoism is superior to Stalinism is not understandable on any ideological basis; it is only understandable in the outright opportunism which has been characteristic of the British foreign policy from Chamberlain's appeasement of Hitler at Munich to Churchill's appeasement of Mao Tze-tung in China or of Malenkov in his latest speech in Parliament.

Our State Department, under Dean Acheson, generally was a mirror of British policy. Therefore, while Acheson paid lip service to anti-communism in China, he served the cause of British trade too ardently to hold an independent view for the United States. John Foster Dulles, who has tried to build an American foreign policy, has encountered so much opposition within our own government that his earlier pronouncements, as well as those of President Eisenhower, have melted away as though in thin air.

This country is now back to the opportunism of looking for Titos and bribing them to serve our temporary purposes. Yet, the Republicans always denounced the expedients of overly-clever men who lived by tricks rather than by principles of action. They are the authors of most of our present misfortunes.

One of the Titos that these statesmen, British and American, would manufacture is Mao Tze-tung, the current Kremlin satrap in China. Following the advice of Nehru of India is always dangerous because Nehru is a broker whose profits can only come from trouble among the Western countries. When he advises that the United States recognize Mao Tze-tung, he is tricking us into a dangerous situation. His motive is to achieve the leadership of Asia for India—a laudable motive for his country but not in our interest.

Senator William Knowland, who is undoubtedly the best-informed member of the Senate on Asiatic questions, recently said in a speech:

"While I recognize there is room for an honest difference of opinion, it is my own belief that the acceptance of the Communist proposal to have prisoners of war turned over to a commission representing India, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Sweden, and Switzerland is a great mistake, and one that may be hard to justify in the years to come.

"All five of these nations have recognized Communist China.

"Two of these nations, Poland and Czechoslovakia, are Communist satellites, and consistently follow Soviet policy.

"The fifth nation, India, has more than 80 per cent of the time, since the Korean War broke out, voted with the Communist side or abstained."

What India wants the United States to do is to accept willy-nilly the Russian terms as presented at Panmunjom. This will seal our defeat in the Korean War and will please India no end because of the Indians' intense hatred for the Anglo-Saxon countries. The defeat of the United States would be a victory not only for Mao but for Nehru as well.

Such a concession on our part, such an appeasement, will not make a Tito out of Mao Tze-tung. He has been in the International Communist Movement since about 1920 when he was a student at the Peking National University. He has been thoroughly trained in Kremlin thinking and in Kremlin techniques. It would take an intellectual and spiritual cataclysm for Mao Tze-tung to break with his entire life as an adult. Nothing in the known facts of the Chinese situation would indicate that such a cataclysm has occurred or is in the offing.

To substitute the imagined for the known; to accept the hope for the reality; to reject available data for inspired improvisations is not statesmanship; it is amateurs playing with the lives of citizens.

Matter Of Fact

Evolution Of Ike

WASHINGTON

Probably the most interesting feature of the President's radio talk on the budget is its status as a new departure. Other appeals to the people and appearances before the people will follow shortly. After a further appearance on television this week, there will be a swing westward, to Minnesota, North Dakota and elsewhere; and then will come an eastern trip, beginning with the Dartmouth commencement.

Those who are qualified to report on the development of Eisenhower's thinking, emphatically say that a larger purpose lies behind all these orations and excursions. Eisenhower wants to be a strong President. He is coming to realize that the source of Presidential strength is the whole people of the United States. He now sees that he must mobilize his popular support, in order to exercise full authority in congress and in his party.

This represents a change that is subtle, yet radical. There is nothing new in Eisenhower's desire not to be remembered as one of the large, unhappy company of weak Presidents. But his ideas about how to be a strong President are plainly evolving.

When he took office, his concept of the Presidency was much more passive and much less political. Confucius all but summed up the Eisenhower concept, in a famous but slightly optimistic remark, "Let the ruler desire good, and the people will be good." The numerous inquests on Eisenhower's first hundred days sounded a bit like variations on ancient Confucianist theme, that the Son of Heaven did not need to "decide," or to "act," or even to "move," but only to "radiate benevolence."

Popular Support Increased

No one is better at radiating benevolence than Dwight D. Eisenhower. His radiations have not exactly "set in order all under heaven," as the Confucianist used to promise rather more than 2,000 years ago. Harmony with Congress has if anything diminished the President's power in Congress. Harmony in the Republican party has encouraged the anti-Eisenhower faction in the hope of taking over. In dealing with other politicians, amiability has not proven to be a universal panecea.

On the other hand, the Presidential radiations have notably increased Eisenhower's already enormous popular support. The polls attest it. The President himself had the fact forcibly called to his attention on his short visit to New York, when crowds lined the evening streets waiting to see him pass, almost in the manner of crowds in the high excitement of campaign time. The good will of the people of the United States can be called into play to overcome opposition, whenever Eisenhower chooses to exploit this supreme Presidential prerogative.

It is hard to say just when or how the decision that this would be needful began to take shape in the President's mind. With respect to dealing with Congress, the White House staff has been divided for a considerable period. The policy of harmony at almost any cost, including the cost of very grave concessions, has strong proponents such as the President's congressional liaison, Maj. Gen. Wiltbon B. Persons. But other members of the staff have challenged this policy more and more strongly and sharply.

Want Popular Support

More generally, the leading members of the cabinet, the chieftains of the Eisenhower faction in the Republican party, and a fair number of the President's trusted private friends, have long been urging the President to talk more freely to the country. They have argued that good will was not enough—that there must be strong, plain spoken popular support for specific Eisenhower policies. This, they have said, could only be secured by "going to the people," by "taking has case to the voters."

Certain incidents have also played their role in Eisenhower's evolution. One was the tremendous New York turn-out, which moved him very deeply. Another, of a very different sort, was the bad quarter-hour at the White House three weeks ago, when the $8,500,000,000 budget cut was first presented to the congressional leaders. The leaders' complaint about the inadequacy of the cuts, and particularly the downright angry reaction of Sen. Robert A. Taft, seemed to have suggested to the President that collaboration alone would not make him master in his own house.

If you think about it, the step is long from persuading politicians persuading the people, so that the people can persuade the politicians by the old familiar method of applying the heart to their backsides.

If this step is taken successfully, the significance will be very great indeed. The Eisenhower administration will be purged of its worst weakness, which has been a curious failure to realize its own power. The President will begin really to lead, instead of allowing himself to be led by those who tell him what the "country will and won't stand for." And in the immediate future, the senators and representatives who are preparing to defy Eisenhower on such issues as reciprocal trade, foreign aid, and the budget in general, will find the going very hard indeed.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON—President Eisenhower has taken his first major political risk—he has failed to reduce taxes as was promised in his political campaign. The conclusion he announced to a nation-wide radio audience was that tax reduction will be possible six months hence—but not now. Yet his main argument for not doing so at this time is that the national security prevents such a step.

Nowhere in the address, however, does the President tell why the world situation is going to be so vastly improved by next January that tax reductions will be recommended by him at that time.

For the message says, on the one hand, that America is living "in an age of peril" and that large defense expenditures must go on "for a long—and indefinite—period of time," and then the President indicates how in a matter of six months "a completely revised program of taxation" will be recommended by him to Congress.

Incentives Declined

Mr. Eisenhower concedes that "for the long term, present taxes are too high" and that they are "becoming a real threat to individual initiative," but he fails to note that the point of diminishing returns for the present system of tax rates has already been reached and that revenues are declining. He charitably forgives the preceding administration for overestimating receipts but does not explain why tax receipts are falling off. The real explanation is that the system of incentives has broken down. Britain and Canada, in the face of serious problems like those faced by the United States, have reduced taxes in order to increase incentives and stimulate business operations so that receipts will increase.

The political implications for the Eisenhower administration are awkward, to say the least. The President is opposed to the repeal now of the excess-profits tax, which the Democratic administration declared by law should end June 30 of this year. Even the reduction of 11 per cent, which Mr. Eisenhower agrees shall be granted in personal income-tax rates effective in January of next year, was put on the statute books by the Democratic Congress and President Truman.

What the Eisenhower administration has done is to ask that the excess-profits tax be continued for six months because of the expectation that this will yield $800,000,000. Yet everybody knows that the excess-profits tax is an uneven and unfair tax and permits big businesses to pay a lower rate of taxes than smaller businesses. This is a favoritism for big business which is politically indefensible.

It seems incredible, after all the talk about the importance of aiding small business, that the Eisenhower administration should have been unable to find $800,000,000 either in other tax rates or in economies so as to be able to remove a vicious measure like the excess-profits-tax law.

Does the administration believe that business operations in America are going to be aided now and that planning is going to be assisted by affirming the excess-profits-tax law? Will not business be confronted with the prospect that maybe in January the administration will again break faith and ask for another six-month extension?

It looks very much as if the administration, finding itself unable to become familiar with budget-cutting possibilities after only four months in office, became apprehensive about changing the tax laws at all this calendar year and, in effect, asked for six months' grace in which to make up its mind what to do.

Better Program Needed

The constitutional duty of Congress is to write the tax laws—as many a President has discovered before. If the Republicans, who control both houses, can't come up with a better tax program than is contained in the Eisenhower message, they will have two strikes against them in the 1954 congressional elections—and, so far as the start of campaigning in primaries is concerned, this means less than 12 months in which to do the job.

What the Eisenhower administration has failed to do also is to realize that America cannot arm the world and call it "national defense," and that our allies in Europe close to Russia are much more willing to assume the risks of a reduction in armament than America is.

Since Britain, moreover, is ready to take Communist China unto its bosom and Churchill is ready to fly to Moscow to make a deal with Malenkov, the least an American administration might have done was to revise drastically its requirement for the defense of both Europe and Asia. Foreign policy is still lacking in basic principle in determining the real extent of America's obligations to allies who have shifted the burden of their defense to the American people. That may be the big issue in the 1954 elections inside both parties.

Man Wed Here Held For Bigamy In Cleveland

A 25-year-old "Romeo" with three wives, including one he married here about seven months ago, is being held in Cleveland on desertion and bigamy charges.

Ohio authorities said the much-married husband, Daniel McAuliffe, gave the following version of his romances:

McAuliffe first married a Pittsburgh girl in 1946 when he was 18. During the six years of that union he courted Esther Marie Varney, 20, also of Pittsburgh.

Unaware that McAuliffe already had a wife, Miss Varney was persuaded by him to come to Cumberland where they were married last October 27. Early this year she became an expectant mother with the baby due in October.

Back in Cleveland, McAuliffe met Mary Robertson, 20, of Iowa City, Iowa, who was to become his third spouse.

On April 16 he told Wife 2 that her mother in North Side (Pittsburgh) had suffered a stroke. She made a hurried trip to the "ill" parent, found her perfectly well and went back to Cleveland two days later.

Meanwhile, McAuliffe had run off to wed Wife 3 and take an apartment in Toledo, Ohio. He was found there this month by Wife 2.

Mrs. Esther McAuliffe charged him with deserting her and he was returned to Cleveland for grand jury action.

Authorities said he faces possible other charges in Cumberland, Pittsburgh and Iowa City.

Grantsville Trucker Is Fined $98

A Grantsville truck driver, Carl Lytle, was fined $98.75 yesterday in Trial Magistrates Court after he pleaded guilty to an overloading charge.

Richard F. Boyle, agent of the State Roads Commission, arrested him Friday at Route 40 at the Six-Mile House for having an "overload of 4,900 pounds gross weight."

Miss Billings Editor Of College Paper

Alene Billings, a junior in the Music Education Department of State Teachers College, Indiana, Pa., has been elected editor-in-chief of the Indiana Penn, college newspaper, for the first semester of 1953-54.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert N. Billings, 420 South Allegany Street, she has served four semesters on the Penn staff as news editor, feature editor, feature writer and reporter.

She has received the Penn award for outstanding work in college journalism. She is chapter editor of Sigma Kappa Sorority and a charter member of Delta Omicron, professional music fraternity at the college.

Miss Billings sings in the college choir and serves on the music committee of the YWCA.

Two Sentenced On Non-Support

Two of three brothers charged with non-support of their 87-year-old mother were found guilty by Associate Judge George Henderson yesterday in Allegany County Circuit Court.

William B. Lease was ordered to pay $5 monthly and his brother, Elmer Lease, was ordered to pay $15 monthly to her.

Another brother, also charged in the information filed in Circuit Court, Thomas Lease, of Keyser, was not present as a summons was unable to have been served by the sheriff's deputies.

His case will be handled when the summons is served, Judge Henderson said.

Geprge Lease, 635 Columbia Avenue, a witness, testified that he had kept his mother since 1933 without any financial assistance from the other brothers.

William and Elmer Lease said that until January when they received a letter from George Lease they had not been asked to contribute to her support.

James Getty, assistant state's attorney, presented the case for the state.

Will Build Home

The building engineer has granted a permit to Hezikiah Hahn Jr., to construct a one-story brick dwelling at 21 Utah Avenue. Cost is estimated at $8,000.

50 Scout Units Attend Camporee

Fifty patrols from 19 Boy Scout troops of Potomac Council, Boy Scouts of America, participated in a council-wide camporee held near Burlington, W. Va., over the weekend.

In all there were 273 boys and 40 leaders at the encampment, according to Willis V. Smith.

Each patrol campside was judged for camping ability, cooking, cleanliness and a number of other items.

Scoring the top honors with equal number of points were the Wolfe Patrol of Troop 6, sponsored by SS. Peter and Paul Church; Indian Patrol of Troop 27, Keyser Rotary Club, and Explorer Patrol of Troop 26, Lonaconing Rotary Club.

Winning blue ribbons also, but with lower number of points than the three leaders who tied, were:

Apache and Tiger patrols, Troop 34, Tri-Towns; Pioneer Patrol, Troop 33, Trinity Methodist Church, Piedmont; Flaming Arrow Patrol, Troop 13, First Presbyterian Church, this city.

Seminole and Flying Eagle patrols, Troop 63, Petersburg Kiwanis Club; Track Patrol, Troop 26; Mohawk, Flaming Arrow and Comanche patrols, Troop 9, Cresaptown Methodist Church.

Flaming Arrow and Eagle patrols, Troop 40, Elk Garden K. of P.; Flaming Arrow and Bob White patrols, Grace Methodist Church, Keyser; Eagle Patrol, Troop 65, Tioga Tribe, Redmen, Midland.

Apache Patrol, Troop 42, First Methodist Church, Frostburg; Eagle and Beaver patrols, Troop 1, St. Luke's Lutheran Church, this city; Wolfe Patrol, Troop 30, Tri-Towns Rotary Club, and Thunderbird Patrol, Troop 33, Piedmont.

Only three patrols did not get blue or red ribbons, Smith said.

Fundamentalist Group Will Meet Here Today

The monthly seminar of the Laymen's Christian Fundamentalist Association of Cumberland will be held today at 7:30 p. m. in the Malta Hall, 67 Prospect Square.

The subject for discussion will be a continuation of the "Descensus ad Inferos," which was started in the April meeting.

W. Carl Richards, moderator, will preside.

Along The Potomac

by Rep. DeWitt S. Hyde

WASHINGTON—The Post Office Department has asked for new bids from private citizens who haul mail over star routes and the move has brought some criticism of the department.

I have checked with postal officials and am assured that this is not a move to deprive experienced star route carriers of their contracts. The law governing these contracts provides for either renewal or rebidding, at the discretion of the postmaster general, every four years.

Postmaster General Summerfield has found that the cost of these routes has skyrocketed in the last few years, and in order to try to save the taxpayers some money, he wants to make sure the carriers charge a competitive price for their work.

If a present carrier is doing a good job, at a reasonable price, his contract will be renewed. The Post Office Department will, of course, take into account his investment in the equipment and trucks he had been using.

Congressman Canfield of New Jersey pointed out the other day on the House floor that costs under current star route contracts have jumped 300 or 400 percent since they were awarded—in one case 1,800 per cent! Those familiar with these facts know that an economy move is necessary.

Transit Commission

The House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee is holding hearings this Thursday and Friday at 10 a. m. in Room 1334 of the House Office Building on my bill to establish a commission to regulate public transportation in the Washington metropolitan area.

There has been a great deal of interest in my proposal, and I hope as many residents of the area as possible can attend these hearings. The Senate has already passed a similar bill introduced by Senator Johnson.

Around The Capitol

Hearings have been held on a bill to incorporate the National Safety Council. I am in favor of the bill. . . . Mrs. Hughes of Frederick High School brought 76 students to the Capitol and I was able to outline for them some of the procedure in federal lawmaking. . . . Five boys from the fifth grade at Wingate Elementary School visited the Capitol accompanied by Mrs. Mazza. . . . Last week I spoke to the sociology class of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School.

I have been honored with and accepted an invitation to deliver the principal address at Memorial Day services at Antietam battleground at Sharpsburg a week from Saturday.

Embassy Will Close After Memorial Day

The Embassy Theatre, Baltimore Street, which has been operated continuously since it was opened by Mrs. Grace M. Fisher in 1931, will be closed after the final show on Memorial Day.

Now operated by Elmart Theatres with G. Ray Light as city general manager and Alston M. Price as house manager, the Embassy started out as a first run exclusive theatre and later switched to a second-run and double-show policy. Declining business, accented during the summer season when drive-in theatres draw heavy patronage, is unofficially given as the reason for the closing.

Employes of the Embassy have received two-week notice that their services will not be required after May 30.

The theatre building is owned by Mrs. Lena Kauffman, LaVale.

Wiley Ford PTA Elects Officers

Mrs. Leroy Fleming was elected president of the Wiley Ford School Parent-Teacher Association at its final meeting of the school year a a recent evening in the auditorium.

Other officers are Mrs. George Sachs, vice president; Miss Hazel Armentrout, secretary, and Mrs. Lowell Manning, treasurer.

Scouts Will Benefit By Minstrel Proceeds

A dress rehearsal for the "Spring Frolics," a minstrel to be presented tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Centre Street Methodist Church Recreation Hall, will be held tonight.

The minstrel is being sponsored by the parents organization of Boy Scout Troop 4 and proceeds will be used to pay for an educational trip to Washington for the Scouts.

Tickets are available and may be obtained from any member of the cast. They may also be obtained at the door Friday night.

Man Wed Here Held For Bigamy In Cleveland

A 25-year-old "Romeo" with three wives, including one he m. rried here about seven months ago, is being held in Cleveland on desertion and bigamy charges.

Ohio authorities said the much-married husband, Daniel McAuliffe, gave the following version of his romances:

McAuliffe first married a Pittsburgh girl in 1946 when he was 18. During the six years of that union he courted Esther Marie Varney, 20, also of Pittsburgh.

Unaware that McAuliffe already had a wife, Miss Varney was persuaded by him to come to Cumberland where they were married last October 27. Early this year she became an expectant mother with the baby due in October.

Back in Cleveland, McAuliffe met Mary Robertson, 20, of Iowa City, Iowa, who was to become his third spouse.

On April 16 he told Wife 2 that her mother in North Side (Pittsburgh) had suffered a stroke. She made a hurried trip to the "ill" parent, found her perfectly well and went back to Cleveland two days later.

Meanwhile, McAuliffe had run off to wed Wife 3 and take an apartment in Toledo, Ohio. He was found there this month by Wife 2.

Mrs. Esther McAuliffe charged him with deserting her and he was returned to Cleveland for grand jury action.

Authorities said he faces possible other charges in Cumberland, Pittsburgh and Iowa City.

Grantsville Trucker Is Fined $98

A Grantsville truck driver, Carl Lytle, was fined $98.75 yesterday in Trial Magistrates Court after he pleaded guilty to an overloading charge.

Richard F. Boyle, agent of the State Roads Commission, arrested him Friday at Route 40 at the Six-Mile House for having an "overload of 4,900 pounds gross weight."

Miss Billings Editor Of College Paper

Alene Billings, a junior in the Music Education Department of State Teachers College, Indiana, Pa., has been elected editor-in-chief of the Indiana Penn, college newspaper, for the first semester of 1953-54.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert N. Billings, 420 South Allegany Street, she has served four semesters on the Penn staff as news editor, feature editor, feature writer and reporter.

She has received the Penn award for outstanding work in college journalism. She is chapter editor of Sigma Kappa Sorority and a charter member of Delta Omicron, professional music fraternity at the college.

Miss Billings sings in the college choir and serves on the music committee of the YWCA.

Two Sentenced On Non-Support

Two of three brothers charged with non-support of their 87-year-old mother were found guilty by Associate Judge George Henderson yesterday in Allegany County Circuit Court.

William B. Lease was ordered to pay $5 monthly and his brother, Elmer Lease, was ordered to pay $15 monthly to her.

Another brother, also charged in the information filed in Circuit Court, Thomas Lease, of Keyser, was not present as a summons was unable to have been served by the sheriff's deputies.

His case will be handled when the summons is served, Judge Henderson said.

George Lease, 635 Columbia Avenue, a witness, testified that he had kept his mother since 1933 without any financial assistance from the other brothers.

William and Elmer Lease said that until January when they received a letter from George Lease they had not been asked to contribute to her support.

James Getty, assistant state's attorney, presented the case for the state.

Will Build Home

The building engineer has granted a permit to Hezikiah Hahn Jr., to construct a one-story brick dwelling at 21 Utah Avenue. Cost is estimated at $8,000.

50 Scout Units Attend Camporee

Fifty patrols from 19 Boy Scout troops of Potomac Council, Boy Scouts of America, participated in a council-wide camporee held near Burlington, W. Va., over the weekend.

In all there were 273 boys and 40 leaders at the encampment, according to Willis V. Smith.

Each patrol campside was judged for camping ability, cooking, cleanliness and a number of other items.

Scoring the top honors with equal number of points were the Wolfe Patrol of Troop 6, sponsored by SS. Peter and Paul Church; Indian Patrol of Troop 27, Keyser Rotary Club, and Explorer Patrol of Troop 26, Lonaconing Rotary Club.

Winning blue ribbons also, but with lower number of points than the three leaders who tied, were:

Apache and Tiger patrols, Troop 34, Tri-Towns; Pioneer Patrol, Troop 33, Trinity Methodist Church, Piedmont; Flaming Arrow Patrol, Troop 13, First Presbyterian Church, this city.

Seminole and Flying Eagle patrols, Troop 63, Petersburg Kiwanis Club; Track Patrol, Troop 26; Mohawk, Flaming Arrow and Comanche patrols, Troop 9, Cresaptown Methodist Church.

Flaming Arrow and Eagle patrols, Troop 40, Elk Garden K. of P.; Flaming Arrow and Bob White patrols, Grace Methodist Church, Keyser; Eagle Patrol, Troop 65, Tioga Tribe, Redmen, Midland.

Apache Patrol, Troop 42, First Methodist Church, Frostburg; Eagle and Beaver patrols, Troop 1, St. Luke's Lutheran Church, this city; Wolfe Patrol, Troop 30, Tri-Towns Rotary Club, and Thunderbird Patrol, Troop 33, Piedmont.

Only three patrols did not get blue or red ribbons, Smith said.

Fundamentalist Group Will Meet Here Today

The monthly seminar of the Laymen's Christian Fundamentalist Association of Cumberland will be held today at 7:30 p. m. in the Malta Hall, 67 Prospect Square.

Along The Potomac

by Rep. DeWitt S. Hyde

WASHINGTON—The Post Office Department has asked for new bids from private citizens who haul mail over star routes and the move has brought some criticism of the department.

I have checked with postal officials and am assured that this is not a move to deprive experienced star route carriers of their contracts. The law governing these contracts provides for either renewal or rebidding, at the discretion of the postmaster general, every four years.

Postmaster General Summerfield has found that the cost of these routes has skyrocketed in the last few years, and in order to try to save the taxpayers some money, he wants to make sure the carriers charge a competitive price for their work.

If a present carrier is doing a good job, at a reasonable price, his contract will be renewed. The Post Office Department will, of course, take into account his investment in the equipment and trucks he had been using.

Congressman Canfield of New Jersey pointed out the other day on the House floor that costs under current star route contracts have jumped 300 or 400 percent since they were awarded—in one case 1,800 per cent! Those familiar with these facts know that an economy move is necessary.

Transit Commission

The House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee is holding hearings this Thursday and Friday at 10 a. m. in Room 1334 of the House Office Building on my bill to establish a commission to regulate public transportation in the Washington metropolitan area.

There has been a great deal of interest in my proposal, and I hope as many residents of the area as possible can attend these hearings. The Senate has already passed a similar bill introduced by Senator Johnson.

Around The Capitol

Hearings have been held on a bill to incorporate the National Safety Council. I am in favor of the bill. . . . Mrs. Hughes of Frederick High School brought 76 students to the Capitol and I was able to outline for them some of the procedure in federal lawmaking. . . . Five boys from the fifth grade at Wingate Elementary School visited the Capitol accompanied by Mrs. Mazza. . . . Last week I spoke to the sociology class of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School.

I have been honored with and accepted an invitation to deliver the principal address at Memorial Day services at Antietam battleground at Sharpsburg a week from Saturday.

Embassy Will Close After Memorial Day

The Embassy Theatre, Baltimore Street, which has been operated continuously since it was opened by Mrs. Grace M. Fisher in 1931, will be closed after the final show on Memorial Day.

Now operated by Elmart Theatres with G. Ray Light as city general manager and Alston M. Price as house manager, the Embassy started out as a first run exclusive theatre and later switched to a second-run and double-show policy. Declining business, accented during the summer season when drive-in theatres draw heavy patronage, is unofficially given as the reason for the closing.

Employes of the Embassy have received two-week notice that their services will not be required after May 30.

The theatre building is owned by Mrs. Lena Kauffman, LaVale.

Wiley Ford PTA Elects Officers

Mrs. Leroy Fleming was elected president of the Wiley Ford School Parent-Teacher Association at its final meeting of the school year a a recent evening in the auditorium.

Other officers are Mrs. George Sachs, vice president; Miss Hazel Armentrout, secretary, and Mrs. Lowell Manning, treasurer.

Scouts Will Benefit By Minstrel Proceeds

A dress rehearsal for the "Spring Frolics," a minstrel to be presented tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Centre Street Methodist Church Recreation Hall, will be held tonight.

The minstrel is being sponsored by the parents organization of Boy Scout Troop 4 and proceeds will be used to pay for an educational trip to Washington for the Scouts.

Tickets are available and may be obtained from any member of the cast. They may also be obtained at the door Friday night.

My New York
by Mel Heimer

NEW YORK—This is the kind of town where, in a leisurely day, you can wake up a singer named Bernice Parks in the East 80s and have a sleepy-eyed interview with her at 10 a. m., and later talk with another singer named Helene Dixon in the East 40s—and discovered that while they don't know each other, they have a common denominator. In this case, it's Jules Podell's baroque downstairs saloon, the Copacabana.

It was only a few years ago that Bernice, a brown-eyed redhead from Boston, made a spectacular hit singing at the Copa, and it is right now that the blond Miss Dixon is on her way to doing the same thing. Helene is merely the production singer there now — that means she yodels the razzmatazz songs to which the showgirls undulate—but she has a couple or so of records due out shortly that will set her up good. Look ma, I'm a talent scout, yet.

However, where Helene is trying to command attention, Bernice is trying to re-command it. To accomplish this, she has only talent, handsome looks and the tightest most spectacular cosumes in nightclub history. Some of you may have seen Julie Wilson on the saloon circuit. Bernice's new gowns make Julie's seem like baggy sweaters and tweed skirts.

Miss Parks has been living in San Antonio, Tex., for the past five years, raising baby (singular; a girl named Joelle) and trying to continue her career sort of long-distance. "I found you can't do it," she said sadly. "You've just got to get to New York frequently, because it's the center of things. I never retired, down in San Antonio. I just got away from the hub. Now, lest I begin hearing that 'Whatever became of Bernice Parks?' line, I've jumped back into the race."

Like Miss Dixon, Miss Parks is leaning on records, which seems to be the absolute sure shortcut to a million dollars these days. Since she recorded "Walkin' My Baby Back Home," she's in high demand; she has eight new ones due out shortly and, as she puts it, "it's funny to see the agency talent-heads coming over to me in restaurants now and buttering me up." It surely is funny, dearie, but man is like that. A little revolting, isn't it?

The fair Helene, a wide-eyed blonde from Brooklyn, is the pretty child who some day will be able to pull a wonderful line on one of New York,s famous male wolves. If one of these engaging gentlemen makes a pass at Miss Dixon in a certain cab, she'll be able to say truthfully, "Please — my father's watching." For it develops that Helen's pa, James Dimone (and also her uncle Joe) has been a cabbie for many years here in New York—and Helene actually has gotten into his cab accidentally while with a date. A polite date, also, so she hasn't had a chance to make with the "Please—pop's looking on" crack.

When Helene's new records start selling, as they will, it'll be amusing to listen to the cries of overnight success, sudden star, etc. Because, like virtually anyone who ever rang the bell in show business, Helene has been coming up the hard, hard way.

Helene won amateur contests at 14—matter of fact, she even sang at service club affairs at seven or eight—and in the last few years she's been all through the small-club routine, in New York and out of town. It wasn't too long ago she was sharing billing in Jimmy Dwyer's Sawdust Trail, a little off-Broadway joint on West 44th, with a girl named Theresa Brewer, who also is not unknown to jukebox fans now.

I will bet that all of those other Copacabana girls who went up and onward—Julie Wilson, Kitty Kallen, Martha Stewart, June Allyson, Lucille Bremer, Olga San Juan, Janice Rule, Adele Mara, etc.—had just about the same long, tough row to hoe. Show business is like any other art form. You begin with 10 per cent talent and you add 90 per cent hard work.

Helen's pop drives her nightly to the Copa from their Brooklyn home — but as all good fathers should do, he makes himself extremely scarce if, after the late show, she has a still later date. She's his little girl yet—but he's wise enough to know that she's a big girl to everyone else.

If your back frequently aches and pains it may be because you are unconsciously abusing it!

Secrets Of Charm
by John Robert Powers

There are two reasons why women are more susceptible to backache than are men. First, because the construction of their lower back is weaker and more easily strained; second, women abuse their backs in a number of ways.

Every time a woman flops over from the waist to retrieve something from the floor, she places an unnecessary strain on her back. A deep knee bend is the saving action. By simply keeping your legs together, holding your back erect and using your knees as levers, you can lower youself as far as you wish without danger of strain. You'll look far more graceful, too!

Relief From Backache

Poor walking habits can contribute to backache, too. If you walk with knees locked, your pelvic girdle is thrown out of line. The eventual results are a foreshortening of the muscles in the lower back and the formation of an unnatural hollow along the spine. Beside looking unattractive, your back is sure then to become a chronic complainer.

Both to prevent and relieve an aching back, always stand and walk with knees flexed. The moment you relax them, your pelvic girdle tips up into its proper position. You can prove this to yourself by standing before a mirror and first tensing and then flexing your knees.

If your back pains more often than not, exercise to stretch and strengthen your back muscles this way: With a flexible leather strap or strong belt in your hand, lie on your back on the floor. Bend both knees so that your feet rest firm and flat on the floor. Now grasp the strap so your hands are about a yard apart and place the center of the strap around your shins. Next press your back down until there is no space between it and the floor and keep it so throughout the exercise (this is important).

Persistence Counts

Pull the strap taut and slowly slide your feet forward along the floor. Resist every bit of this action with the strap. When you can move your feet no farther, use the strap to pull your knees up to your chest. Relax and repeat. Five times is a good starter; twenty-five daily is your goal.

It will take more than spasmodic efforts to gain freedom from backache. But several months of daily practice will work wonders!

MIDDLE GROUND SANEST

IN MANY fields of human activity, the sound position to take is the middle ground, as the greatest extremists in either direction usually overdo their attitudes. That is the case on the subject of pre-emptive bids, either when made originally or as a jump over someone else's call. On one side are those who attempt a high bid whenever they consider they have enough playing tricks for it, and on the other are those who never make such a bid. In the center are those who favor such a bid with enough suit length to assure keeping any loss within bounds, but sufficient weakness in high cards to render it likely the hand is valueless at any other declaration, played by either side.

South had a hand, in that team of four match, which was by no means useless if the eventual contract was in something other than hearts. That is the way the holder of it felt at the first table, so he made just a minimum call of 1-Heart, being prepared to take additional action later as developments warranted. This policy of moderation and soundness paid off in the end, as the 4-Spades contract of West was beaten. The heart 9 was opened to the A, the club singleton returned, a trump lost to the A, a club ruffed by South, and the diamond A later took the setting trick.

Where South bid the 4-Hearts on his first turn at Table 2, the contract was set a brace of tricks. The defenders got two in diamonds and one in each other suit. That gave East and West 300 points at Table 2 and their North-South mates at Table 1 scored 100 points, so that this team won the deal by 400 points.

Local Sheet Metal Company Expanding To Larger Plant

A local business is expanding to a new building on Oldtown Road, four miles east of Cumberland at North Branch, enabling increased production and added employment.

John E. Twigg, 1100 Oldtown Road, owner of the Twigg Sheet Metal Products Corporation, said the new plant when completed next month will have 7,000 square feet of floor space.

His principal product will be furnace fittings, Twigg said, although he will be equipped to do most any type of sheet metal work.

Twigg's present plant has 4,000 square feet of floor space. He makes tractor parts, furnace fittings and other products.

The new plant will allow the manufacturing of more types of sheet metal products, along with an increased production, Twigg said.

The corporation has markets in Maryland and Pennsylvania. One of his contracts is furnishing tool boxes and chain guards for the tractor plant at Keyser.

Today, Twigg said he has six to eight employes but when the new building is completed at North Branch next month and the new sheet metal equipment is installed and production started from 35 to 40 workers will be used.

The concrete block structure has been erected and yesterday the roof was placed on it. The plant has a concrete floor.

Twigg has been in the sheet metal business since 1940. After service in World War II, he built his present plant at 1100 Oldtown Road.

Market, With Buying Heavy, Stages Best Rally Of Year

NEW YORK, May 20 (AP)—In a big burst of buying enthusiasm, the Stock Market today staged its biggest rally of the year.

Aircrafts started the ball rolling, railroads took command and turned the affair into a general recovery movement, and steels, motors, oils and the other major divisions went along with vigor.

Several key issues were up between 3 and 5 points.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up $1.40. That rise has not been exceeded since May 2, 1952.

Southern Railway was up as high as 99½ and closed at 98⅞ with a gain of 4⅜.

Atlantic Coast Line was up 3¼ at 106¼, Santa Fe 3½ at 96, Rock Island up 2⅛ at 75⅛, and Northern Pacific 2¾ at 74.

With the Associated Press average of 60 stocks up $1.40 at $111.40, the industrial component gained $1.30, the railroads gained $2.30, and the utilities gained 20 cents.

The list was composed of 1,121 individual issues with 663 gainers and only 198 losers. There were 29 new highs for the year and 44 new lows established.

Volume expanded with the rise and came to 1,690,000 shares, best in around a month. Yesterday's total was 1,120,000 shares.

Pepsi-Cola was the day's most active issue with a gain of ⅞ at 15¼ and 42,900 traded.

It was followed by New York Central up ⅝ at 24, Intercontinental Rubber up ½ at 5⅝, Nickel Plate up 1¾ at 44¼, and Pennsylvania Railroad up ¾ at 21⅞.

Cresaptown Captures County Junior High Track Meet

AHS Is Second In 8th Annual Event At Beall

Fort Hill Dethroned As Champs; Four New Records Set

Cresaptown School's thinclads won the eighth annual Allegany County Junior High School track and field meet yesterday at Beall High School field in Frostburg, defeating four other county schools for the victory.

The Cresaptown team registered 71 points to edge Allegany Junior High's thinclads who finished second with 65 points. Fort Hill's defending champions were dethroned and finished third with 49 points. Central had 10 markers and Beall three to finish out the scoring.

Four new records went into the books in the meet. Kalbaugh of Fort Hill bested the old broad jump mark with a leap of 16 feet, 2½ inches in the 95 pound class. Lease of Allegany set the previous mark of 15 feet, 7 inches in 1948.

In the 100 yard dash for 115 pounders the old mark of 11.3 seconds went by the boards as Bean of Allegany ran the dash in 11.1.

Cecil of Cresaptown bested the Junior Unlimited mark in the 100 yard dash also by winning his heat in 10.8 seconds. The previous record was 10.9 set by Eirich of Allegany in 1950. However Cecil was defeated in the finals by Kessler of Fort Hill who won in 11 seconds flat.

The Fort Hill 880 relay in the Unlimited division set a new mark of 1:45.2 in winning to best the old mark of 1:46 also held by Fort Hill.

Hyndman, Beall To Meet Today At Frostburg

Leading contenders for the Bi-State Conference baseball title will hook up in the second and final game of their series when Hyndman High and Beall High tangle today at Frostburg.

Hyndman leads the race with a 7-1 record, one full game ahead of Beall which holds the runner-up spot with a 7-3 mark.

Even though Beall should win today it can't knock Hyndman out of first place but such a result would tighten up the race.

Hyndman won the series opener, 7-5.

Lefty Lou Hite and Tommy Richards, two of the league's top drawer pitchers, are expected to be on the firing line.

Frostburg State Teachers College will lower the curtain on its season today by playing Hagerstown Junior College in the Hub City.

Sun spots may reach a size as much as 28 times that of the earth's surface.

Jack Hudson Is St. Mary's Mibs Champ

Defeats Krampf In School Finals

Jack Hudson followed in the footsteps of an older brother yesterday to win the marbles championship of St. Mary's School, Oldtown Road. He defeated Emil Krampf, one of the youngest entries in the tournament, after Krampf had won his way through the semi-finals over Michael Clarke, Robert Beck, Rodney Hiett and Richard Garlitz. Hudson defeated John Morris, Paul Goetz and Edgar Phillips, last year's champion, in the semi-finals, and then vanquished Krampf in the finals.

Aiding tournament officials in the St. Mary's games, in which there were 38 contestants, were the Rev. Robert F. Hopkins, Eugene Brehm and Harry Dickerhoof.

Today's tournament finals are at Humbird School and tomorrow's games are at Virginia Avenue.

Next week will wind up the individual school tournaments with finals Monday at Allegany; Wednesday East Side; Thursday Penn Avenue and Friday at Gephart.

The 22 school champs will "shoot it out" Tuesday, June 2, at 3:30 p. m. at Gephart Playground, Frederick street, for the championship of the Cumberland area. The Times-News will pay the champ's expenses to Asbury Park, N. J. June 14-19 to play in the National Marbles Tournament.

Woodling's Hit Earns Yankees 9 To 8 Triumph

Stengel Uses 21 Men Against Tigers

NEW YORK, May 20 (AP)—Gene Woodling's ninth inning single with the bases loaded and score tied Stengel's lineup juggling with a 9-8 New York Yankee victory today over the Detroit Tigers.

Stengel used 21 men, finally resorting to Allie Reynolds to pull the game out. For his one-inning bullpen job, Reynolds earned his fourth win.

Woodling's winning hit followed an error by Jerry Priddy, a sacrifice bunt and two walks. There was one out when the Yankee left fielder lined a Ray Herbert pitch over short to score Billy Martin with the tie-breaker.

As You Were

This one-time baseball catcher, who placed a lot of minor league ball in his youth, will mark his 81st birthday on Tuesday, May 26.

A native of Cumberland, he was born on Goethe street in 1872.

In 1893 when he was 21 he broke in with the Cumberland team when the locals played their home game at a park in the vicinity of Pulaski street in the North End of town. George Daisy, Henry Knieriem and Fred Hoffman were among the members of the same club. George Hobart, editor of the Scimitar, local newspaper, was manager of the team.

The year 1895 found him with Sharon (Pa.) in the Iron and Oil League. Other teams in that circuit were Franklin, Oil City, Bradford, Titusville, Warren and New Castle.

After spending 1896 with Hartford, Conn., in the Atlantic League he joined Chambersburg in the Cumberland Valley League but he was injured after running into a fence while playing in a game against Hanover and was out of baseball for several years.

He started the 1899 season with Kokomo (Ind.) but returned home when the Indiana-Illinois League blew up. The following season he joined Kokomo again in the Indiana State League but that circuit went defunct and he wound up the year at Michigan City.

A sore arm bothered him in 1901 when he was with three different clubs—Augusta (Me.) in the New England League; Rock Island, Ill., and Huntingdon, Pa.

After a year in the Cotton States League (1902) with Vicksburg, Miss., he played at Homestead (Pa.) and was in 29 games with Col. Tom Dillon's Frostburg team in 1903.

Back in Cumberland in 1904 he caught for the local club managed by Joe Metzner. Games were played at Potomac Park on the West Side in those days. Other Cumberland players that season included Hugh Tate, Joe Laughlin, Buck Hooker, Kid Mellinger, Pat Brophy, who later managed Frostburg; Elder Humbird, Ed Rodebaugh, Ross Railey and Frank Bigbee. George G. Young was president of the club, Frank Keyser was secretary-treasurer, and Harry Irvine who later managed Cumberland and became the city's chief executive about 15 years ago, was a member of the board of directors.

This "globe trotting" catcher joined Dallas of the Texas League for his last fling at baseball in 1906. In the spring he caught three games in which Dallas defeated the St. Louis Browns and also figured in three exhibition tilts against the St. Louis Cardinals.

For an octogenarian he has a most remarkable memory and seems to recall dates and names of persons with ease.

One of Cumberland's greatest pitchers of the 1880's, he recalls, was Mark Baldwin, who led the American Association in strikeouts with 368 in 1889 while hurling for Columbus. Baldwin, who became a physician, was in the majors with Chicago in 1890 and led the league with 200 strikeouts.

Can you name the player pictured here?

He is Lewis W. "Lew" Metz, of 450 North Waverly Terrace. The photo of Mr. Metz, who probably has more information available about Cumberland baseball of yesteryear than any other person, was taken in 1902 when he played at Vicksburg, Miss.

Dodgers Beat Milwaukee 7-2, Before 23,450

Braves Attendance Hits 302,667 Mark

MILWAUKEE, May 20 (AP) — The Brooklyn Dodgers combined 10 hits with six stolen bases and Billy Loes' six-hit pitching today to crush the Milwaukee Braves, 7-2, in the windup of their first western road trip.

A crowd of 23,450, which boosted the Braves' home attendance for 13 playing dates to 302,667, watched their favorites drop their first series in the County Stadium this year. The Dodgers won the opener last night, 4-1.

Today's attendance gave the Braves 21,389 more fans than saw them perform all last season in Boston.

Giants Blast Cubs, 16 To 6

CHICAGO, May 20 (AP) — The New York Giants lowered a 21-hit boom on the hapless Chicago Cubs for a 16-6 payoff before a ladies' day turnout of 13,555 persons this sunny afternoon.

In suffering their fourteenth defeat in the past 19 games, the Cubs paraded seven pitchers to the mound as Monte Irvin, Al Dark, and Davey Williams poled home runs.

The New Yorkers also had three triples and as many doubles to head home from their first western invasion with a record of five victories in eight games—the last four in a row.

Redlegs Batter Simmons, 14-5

Phillies Southpaw Loses 2nd Contest

CINCINNATI, May 20 (AP) — The Cincinnati Redlegs used the great Curt Simmons like a practice pitcher today to drive him off the mound and defeat Philadelphia, 14 to 5.

Simmons, who entered the game with six victories, one defeat and a record having put out the last 27 batters to face him, had little on his southpaw offerings, and went out after two were retired in the fourth inning.

Four home runs—one of them Ted Kluszewski's ninth of the season and fourth in the last five games—and 10 other bingles did not do the National League leaders any good. They also made three errors.

Oppose Tightening Of Boxing Rules

BOSTON, May 20 (AP)—Boxing officials and supporters today opposed plans to tighten the rules on the sport in Massachusetts. One asserted proposed changes were planned only to "appease the television audience."

That assertion came from Tommy Rawson, referee in the Tommy Collins-Jimmy Carter lightweight championship bout last month which was halted by the referee after Collins was knocked down ten times in two rounds.

Promoter Anthony "Rip" Valente was outspoken in his objection to changes.

"Why satisfy the television viewers—they see the fight for nothing, and they are the biggest knockers in the world," he said.

PHILADELPHIA, May 20 (AP) — Joe Astroth singled home Cass Michaels from third with two out in the ninth tonight to give the Philadelphia Athletics their second straight 2-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox in a pitching duel between southpaws Morris Martin of the A's and Billy Pierce.

Hyndman, Beall To Meet Today At Frostburg

Leading contenders for the Bi-State Conference baseball title will hook up in the second and final game of their series when Hyndman High and Beall High tangle today at Frostburg.

Hyndman leads the race with a 7-1 record, one full game ahead of Beall which holds the runner-up spot with a 7-3 mark.

Even though Beall should win today it can't knock Hyndman out of first place but such a result would tighten up the race.

Hyndman won the series opener, 7-5.

Lefty Lou Hite and Tommy Richards, two of the league's top drawer pitchers, are expected to be on the firing line.

Frostburg State Teachers College will lower the curtain on its season today by playing Hagerstown Junior College in the Hub City.

Sun spots may reach a size as much as 28 times that of the earth's surface.

Jack Hudson Is St. Mary's Mibs Champ

Defeats Krampf In School Finals

Jack Hudson followed in the footsteps of an older brother yesterday to win the marbles championship of St. Mary's School, Oldtown Road. He defeated Emil Krampf, one of the youngest entries in the tournament, after Krampf had won his way through the semi-finals over Michael Clarke, Robert Beck, Rodney Hiett and Richard Garlitz. Hudson defeated John Morris, Paul Goetz and Edgar Phillips, last year's champion, in the semi-finals, and then vanquished Krampf in the finals.

Aiding tournament officials in the St. Mary's games, in which there were 38 contestants, were the Rev. Robert F. Hopkins, Eugene Brehm and Harry Dickerhoof.

Today's tournament finals are at Humbird School and tomorrow's games are at Virginia Avenue.

Next week will wind up the individual school tournaments with finals Monday at Allegany; Wednesday East Side; Thursday Penn Avenue and Friday at Gephart.

The 22 school champs will "shoot it out" Tuesday, June 2, at 3:30 p. m. at Gephart Playground, Frederick street, for the championship of the Cumberland area. The Times-News will pay the champ's expenses to Asbury Park, N. J. June 14-19 to play in the National Marbles Tournament.

Woodling's Hit Earns Yankees 9 To 8 Triumph

Stengel Uses 21 Men Against Tigers

NEW YORK, May 20 (AP)—Gene Woodling's ninth inning single with the bases loaded and score tied Stengel's lineup juggling with a 9-8 New York Yankee victory today over the Detroit Tigers.

Stengel used 21 men, finally resorting to Allie Reynolds to pull the game out. For his one-inning bullpen job, Reynolds earned his fourth win.

Woodling's winning hit followed an error by Jerry Priddy, a sacrifice bunt and two walks. There was one out when the Yankee left fielder lined a Ray Herbert pitch over short to score Billy Martin with the tie-breaker.

As You Were

This one-time baseball catcher, who placed a lot of minor league ball in his youth, will mark his 81st birthday on Tuesday, May 26.

A native of Cumberland, he was born on Goethe street in 1872.

In 1893 when he was 21 he broke in with the Cumberland team when the locals played their home game at a park in the vicinity of Pulaski street in the North End of town. George Daisy, Henry Knieriem and Fred Hoffman were among the members of the same club. George Hobart, editor of the Scimitar, local newspaper, was manager of the team.

The year 1895 found him with Sharon (Pa.) in the Iron and Oil League. Other teams in that circuit were Franklin, Oil City, Bradford, Titusville, Warren and New Castle.

After spending 1896 with Hartford, Conn., in the Atlantic League he joined Chambersburg in the Cumberland Valley League but he was injured after running into a fence while playing in a game against Hanover and was out of baseball for several years.

He started the 1899 season with Kokomo (Ind.) but returned home when the Indiana-Illinois League blew up. The following season he joined Kokomo again in the Indiana State League but that circuit went defunct and he wound up the year at Michigan City.

A sore arm bothered him in 1901 when he was with three different clubs—Augusta (Me.) in the New England League; Rock Island, Ill., and Huntingdon, Pa.

After a year in the Cotton States League (1902) with Vicksburg, Miss., he played at Homestead (Pa.) and was in 29 games with Col. Tom Dillon's Frostburg team in 1903.

Back in Cumberland in 1904 he caught for the local club managed by Joe Metzner. Games were played at Potomac Park on the West Side in those days. Other Cumberland players that season included Hugh Tate, Joe Laughlin, Buck Hooker, Kid Mellinger, Pat Brophy, who later managed Frostburg; Elder Humbird, Ed Rodebaugh, Ross Railey and Frank Bigbee. George G. Young was president of the club, Frank Keyser was secretary-treasurer, and Harry Irvine who later managed Cumberland and became the city's chief executive about 15 years ago, was a member of the board of directors.

This "globe trotting" catcher joined Dallas of the Texas League for his last fling at baseball in 1906. In the spring he caught three games in which Dallas defeated the St. Louis Browns and also figured in three exhibition tilts against the St. Louis Cardinals.

For an octogenarian he has a most remarkable memory and seems to recall dates and names of persons with ease.

One of Cumberland's greatest pitchers of the 1880's, he recalls, was Mark Baldwin, who led the American Association in strikeouts with 368 in 1889 while hurling for Columbus. Baldwin, who became a physician, was in the majors with Chicago in 1890 and led the league with 200 strikeouts.

Can you name the player pictured here?

He is Lewis W. "Lew" Metz, of 450 North Waverly Terrace. The photo of Mr. Metz, who probably has more information available about Cumberland baseball of yesteryear than any other person, was taken in 1902 when he played at Vicksburg, Miss.

Dodgers Beat Milwaukee 7-2, Before 23,450

Braves Attendance Hits 302,667 Mark

MILWAUKEE, May 20 (AP) — The Brooklyn Dodgers combined 10 hits with six stolen bases and Billy Loes' six-hit pitching today to crush the Milwaukee Braves, 7-2, in the windup of their first western road trip.

A crowd of 23,450, which boosted the Braves' home attendance for 13 playing dates to 302,667, watched their favorites drop their first series in the County Stadium this year. The Dodgers won the opener last night, 4-1.

Today's attendance gave the Braves 21,389 more fans than saw them perform all last season in Boston.

Giants Blast Cubs, 16 To 6

CHICAGO, May 20 (AP) — The New York Giants lowered a 21-hit boom on the hapless Chicago Cubs for a 16-6 payoff before a ladies' day turnout of 13,555 persons this sunny afternoon.

In suffering their fourteenth defeat in the past 19 games, the Cubs paraded seven pitchers to the mound as Monte Irvin, Al Dark, and Davey Williams poled home runs.

The New Yorkers also had three triples and as many doubles to head home from their first western invasion with a record of five victories in eight games—the last four in a row.

Redlegs Batter Simmons, 14-5

Phillies Southpaw Loses 2nd Contest

CINCINNATI, May 20 (AP) — The Cincinnati Redlegs used the great Curt Simmons like a practice pitcher today to drive him off the mound and defeat Philadelphia, 14 to 5.

Simmons, who entered the game with six victories, one defeat and a record having put out the last 27 batters to face him, had little on his southpaw offerings, and went out after two were retired in the fourth inning.

Four home runs—one of them Ted Kluszewski's ninth of the season and fourth in the last five games—and 10 other bingles did not do the National League leaders any good. They also made three errors.

Oppose Tightening Of Boxing Rules

BOSTON, May 20 (AP)—Boxing officials and supporters today opposed plans to tighten the rules on the sport in Massachusetts. One asserted proposed changes were planned only to "appease the television audience."

That assertion came from Tommy Rawson, referee in the Tommy Collins-Jimmy Carter lightweight championship bout last month which was halted by the referee after Collins was knocked down ten times in two rounds.

Promoter Anthony "Rip" Valente was outspoken in his objection to changes.

"Why satisfy the television viewers—they see the fight for nothing, and they are the biggest knockers in the world," he said.

PHILADELPHIA, May 20 (AP) — Joe Astroth singled home Cass Michaels from third with two out in the ninth tonight to give the Philadelphia Athletics their second straight 2-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox in a pitching duel between southpaws Morris Martin of the A's and Billy Pierce.

Explorers Tied For Third In Loop With Win Over Central

LaSalle High School's Explorers broke a 1-1 tie in the sixth inning yesterday at Barton and went on to defeat Central High's Tigers, 4-1, in a Bi-State Conference tilt. The win was the third in a row for the Explorers and enabled them to tie for third place in the conference.

With two out in the sixth Mike Larkin and "Dude" Shaffer put back to back doubles for the winning run. The winners added two more tallies against Jack Brodie in the seventh to ice the contest.

With one out Tim Conroy singled, stole second and scored on Denny Shuck's two-bagger. Barney Spearman then singled home Shuck.

Central knotted the score at 1-1 when Tom Wood singled, and scored on Jimmy Wilson's pinch double, batting for Jerry Lancaster.

Turnbull had two hits for Central and Larkin and Shaffer had two bingles for LaSalle. The lineups:

Railbirds Again Favor Dancer In Preakness

Gray Gets Its First Look At Pimlico Track

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP)—"The gray horse" walked on to the Pimlico track for the first time this morning and the railbird experts unanimously conceded him Saturday's Preakness.

The story was the same as before the Kentucky Derby. Everyone was loudest in praise of Native Dancer then and nobody saw how he could lose. But he did.

"Look at that big horse," drooled Trainer Clyde Troutt. "There ought to be a law making such a horse give weight to my little one."

For the trainer of a competitor, Troutt is remarkably firm on Native Dancer.

"It was a shame for a horse like that to be beaten," said the trainer for Eugene Constantin Jr. "It was just one of those unlucky breaks."

Shortly after Trainer Bill Winfrey led out the Dancer, Spring Hill Farm's Jamie K arrived for his first feel of the strip.

"Hey, John, that gray horse is out there," yelled Eddie Hayward who trains Dark Star, only conqueror of Native Dancer. Hayward was calling to John Partridge, Jamie K trainer.

"What do you mean, he might get an inferiority complex if he sees the gray before Saturday?" Hayward was asked.

Troutt's Royal Bay Gem was fourth in the Derby and beat Dark Star here Monday in the Preakness Prep. But the trainer has no illusions about his early plodder in the $100,000 race Saturday.

"He was able to stay up close Monday because the pace was so slow," Troutt explained. "Besides, I think Dark Star might have needed that race."

It was the first start since the Derby May 2 for Harry Guggenheim's colt while Royal Bay Gem stuck in a victory May 9 in New Jersey.

Native Dancer, Dark Star, Royal Bay Gem and Jamie K are to be entered officially tomorrow morning. Also expected between 6 a.m. and 9 a.m. EST are Mrs. Gordon Guiberson's Correspondent, Ben Whitaker's Tahitian King and Bruce Campbell's Ram O'War.

The Preakness is set for 4:45 p. m. EST Saturday and will be on radio and television on the Columbia Broadcasting System.

NEW YORK, May 20 (INS)—You must be getting tired of hearing about baseball's masterminds—those so-called geniuses who shift players like a chess master.

By a strange coincidence virtually all the masterminds of baseball have led New York teams.

The reason is simple. New York writers have been sold a bill of goods by the baseball people. Elsewhere sports writers are not so gullible.

Who are the great master minds today? Why, according to the gullible New York scribes, the current geniuses are Leo Durocher of the Giants, Casey Stengel of the Yanks and Charley Dressen of the Dodgers.

And how do they prove their genius? Well, Stengel set a record by using 23—that's right, 23—men in a single game the other day.

Durocher and Dressen must be master minds because they keep shifting players almost every day—turning first basemen into outfielders, and switching infielders around to different jobs.

Ball clubs spend fortunes to send players to training camps for many weeks every spring and during that time a manager is supposed to learn just what he has in playing talent.

During that time we read reams of hokum quoting the master minds to the effect that they are all set, they know just who is who and they are ready to go.

But within a month we find that the master mind didn't know what he was talking about and the alibis start to flow.

And registering this beef reminds us we have another squawk and that refers to the lifting of players, especially pitchers.

Let a player go hitless for two or three games and he is yanked. Let a team put two hits together, even in the first inning, and immediately the bull pen brigade goes to work.

Under some of our current master minds Christy Mathewson or Old Pete Alexander would never have had a chance to finish half their games.

We much prefer the system of Rajah Hornsby who is no genius. Merely a smart guy who knows baseball and baseball players.

The other night the Reds beat the Dodgers 2 to 1 in 10 innings. Bud Podbielan walked 13 men and hit another but did Hornsby get the jitters and yank him? He did not. But a mastermind would have had Bud out of there in the first inning when he gave up three walks and a double.

Bud got better as he went along and was going great at the finish.

The Rajah is no genius but he knows how to get the best out of what he has, just as he did when winning a pennant and world series with the Cardinals many years ago.

Yes, the mastermind stuff is the pure hokum. If we had less of it we would have better and faster ball games and better players because any player is bound to get the jitters if he fears he is in constant danger of being yanked at any moment.

Giardello, Sanders Signed For Bout

This will be the second meeting of the pair. Giardello won by a decision at Brooklyn when both he and Sanders were just breaking into professional ranks.

Preakness On TV

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP)—A half hour description of the Preakness Saturday will be offered simultaneously on radio and television by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Ed Egan Paces Potomac State

Pittsburgher Hit .380; Niedbala's .371 2nd

Shortstop Eddie Egan of Pittsburgh led the hitters of Potomac State College's baseball team for the 1953 season with a lofty average of .380 in 13 games.

Joe Niedbala, second sacker, one of three players who figured in all 16 games, was the runner-up with a .371 followed by Jay Gorman and Beck with .320 each.

In winning six games and losing 10, Potomac State had a team batting average of .273, obtaining 149 hits in 546 official times at bat and scored 102 runs.

Niedbala led in hits with a total of 26 and also was the team's leading run getter with 19 tallies.

Junior Dove topped the pitchers with a 3-3 record while Dick Lyons scored three wins against four losses. The statistics:

Mohair Casuals

Nelson Shines in Casual Coat

FASHION: A few weeks back, we mentioned the mohair tuxedo adopted by TV performers because of its shine under the lights. Well, you don't have to be in front of the cameras or even dressed formally now to get the advantages of mohair's lightweight sheen. One of the smartest casual garments for the oncoming warm season is the new alpaca jacket. It fits into a lot of well turned sport dress combinations—like the pearl-gray tie and slacks worn by Hollywood's Gene Nelson (at right).

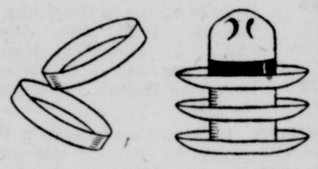

Hot-Weather Help: The National Hair Treatment Foundation warns that serious damage to the scalp can result from over-exposure to the sun between 10 a. m. and 4 p. m. A little ultra-violet is good for you—but not too much. Sit in the shade or wear a head covering part of the time. . . . Put away any of your shirts that have snug collars until next winter. They're too uncomfortable to have around your neck in the summer.

Travel Tips: If you're going out of the country, here are a few more reminders: Even with your legal allowance, there are certain branded perfumes, watches, etc., that cannot be brought back duty free. Be sure you can prove prior possession on everything you take out with you. Best idea is to check with the U. S. Customs Service. . . . If the water in a foreign country disagrees with you, chances are the ice in drinks will too!

June Groom: Here are answers to the most frequently asked questions about weddings: It's definitely improper to wear a tuxedo for a before-six p. m. wedding. For all but a formal daytime church wedding, wear a dark blue light-weight suit. . . . The traditional matching ties and gloves for male members of the wedding party can be dispensed with at an informal summer ceremony. . . . For evening semi-formal weddings, either white or dark tuxedos are proper—but the entire wedding party should dress uniformly.

Quotable Quotes: Carl Sandburg—"Slang is a language that takes off its coat—spits on its hands—and goes to work!" . . . Anonymous—"Sometimes a man thinks he has a clean conscience when he only has a poor memory." . . . Sir Philip Gibbs—"It's better to give than to lend—and it costs about the same thing."

Amateur Chef: While they say, "There's no such thing as a little garlic," you can get a subtle seasoning by rubbing just the lid of a pan with garlic. . . . To make better, stronger-flavored iced tea and coffee, freeze regular coffee and tea into ice cubes.

Hat Care: If you have more hats than will sit side-by-side on a shelf, ask your hat store for a few cardboard dividers (see drawing). Or you can make them yourself by gluing together a circle of cardboard. Then you can stack hats safely, without damaging the crowns.

Pass the Cigars: This week to—George White, of "Scandals" fame, who is making a comeback-of-the-year by producing the new hit tabloid musical show at a New York night club. He's heading back toward the top spot he shared in days gone by with such names as Ziegfeld and Earl Carroll.

Bad Track Again Delays Wheeling Meet

WHEELING, W. Va., May 20 (AP)—Track conditions delayed for one hour the start of the eight-race program at Wheeling Downs today.

Jockeys balked at riding the first race scheduled to start at 2:15 p.m. for the second straight day, reportedly over muddy track.

But Wheeling Downs officials said work crews labored around the clock after yesterday's 65 minute delay to get the track in shape. A spokesman for Wheeling Downs said jockeys agreed to start future races on time.

Olympic Planner Resigns His Job

Coles Says Post Is "Untenable"

MELBOURNE, May 20 (AP) — The chief Australian planner for the 1956 Olympic games resigned tonight—an act which was called a "national tragedy" by Melbourne's acting lord mayor.

"There was nothing left me but to resign," said Arthur W. Coles, who turned in his post as chairman of the Olympic Games Control Committee. "My position was untenable."

Coles gave up his job when the government decided not to build the Olympic swimming pool on the site accepted by the International Olympic Committee at its April meeting in Mexico City.

In Chicago, Avery Brundage, president of the IOC, said "something must be seriously wrong" with the plans for the games and that the IOC executive committee may hold an emergency meeting to consider another city.

"Mr. Coles is a conservative business man," said Brundage. "He certainly did not resign unless something seriously was wrong."

The first railroad bridge erected across the Mississippi river was built at Davenport, Ia., in 1856.

Railbirds Again Favor Dancer In Preakness

Gray Gets Its First Look At Pimlico Track

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP)—"The gray horse" walked on to the Pimlico track for the first time this morning and the railbird experts unanimously conceded him Saturday's Preakness.

The story was the same as before the Kentucky Derby. Everyone was loudest in praise of Native Dancer then and nobody saw how he could lose. But he did.

"Look at that big horse," drooled Trainer Clyde Troutt. "There ought to be a law making such a horse give weight to my little one."

Troutt trains Royal Bay Gem, one of the six colts who will try to hand Native Dancer the second defeat of his career in the 77th Preakness. They'll all carry 126 pounds for the mile and three sixteenths.

For the trainer of a competitor, Troutt is remarkably firm on Native Dancer.

"It was a shame for a horse like that to be beaten," said the trainer for Eugene Constantin Jr. "It was just one of those unlucky breaks."

Shortly after Trainer Bill Winfrey led out the Dancer, Spring Hill Farm's Jamie K arrived for his first feel of the strip.

"Hey, John, that gray horse is out there," yelled Eddie Hayward who trains Dark Star, only conqueror of Native Dancer. Hayward was calling to John Partridge, Jamie K trainer.

"What do you mean, he might get an inferiority complex if he sees the gray before Saturday?" Hayward was asked.

"Sure, I got my horse on and off early for that reason," replied the Derby winner's trainer.

Troutt's Royal Bay Gem was fourth in the Derby and beat Dark Star here Monday in the Preakness Prep. But the trainer has no illusions about his early plodder in the $100,000 race Saturday.

"He was able to stay up close Monday because the pace was so slow," Troutt explained. "Besides, I think Dark Star might have needed that race."

It was the first start since the Derby May 2 for Harry Guggenheim's colt while Royal Bay Gem stuck in a victory May 9 in New Jersey.

Native Dancer, Dark Star, Royal Bay Gem and Jamie K are to be entered officially tomorrow morning. Also expected between 6 a.m. and 9 a.m. EST are Mrs. Gordon Guiberson's Correspondent, Ben Whitaker's Tahitian King and Bruce Campbell's Ram O'War.

The Preakness is set for 4:45 p. m. EST Saturday and will be on radio and television on the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Sports Grill

By PAT ROBINSON

NEW YORK, May 20 (INS)—You must be getting tired of hearing about baseball's masterminds—those so-called geniuses who shift players like a chess master.

By a strange coincidence virtually all the masterminds of baseball have led New York teams.

The reason is simple. New York writers have been sold a bill of goods by the baseball people. Elsewhere sports writers are not so gullible.

Who are the great master minds today? Why, according to the gullible New York scribes, the current geniuses are Leo Durocher of the Giants, Casey Stengel of the Yanks and Charley Dressen of the Dodgers.

And how do they prove their genius? Well, Stengel set a record by using 23—that's right, 23—men in a single game the other day.

Durocher and Dressen must be master minds because they keep shifting players almost every day—turning first basemen into outfielders, and switching infielders around to different jobs.

Ball clubs spend fortunes to send players to training camps for many weeks every spring and during that time a manager is supposed to learn just what he has in playing talent.

During that time we read reams of hokum quoting the master minds to the effect that they are all set, they know just who is who and they are ready to go.

But within a month we find that the master mind didn't know what he was talking about and the alibis start to flow.

And registering this beef reminds us we have another squawk and that refers to the lifting of players, especially pitchers.

Let a player go hitless for two or three games and he is yanked. Let a team put two hits together, even in the first inning, and immediately the bull pen brigade goes to work.

Under some of our current master minds Christy Mathewson or Old Pete Alexander would never have had a chance to finish half their games.

We much prefer the system of Rajah Hornsby who is no genius. Merely a smart guy who knows baseball and baseball players.

The other night the Reds beat the Dodgers 2 to 1 in 10 innings. Bud Podbielan walked 13 men and hit another but did Hornsby get the jitters and yank him? He did not. But a mastermind would have had Bud out of there in the first inning when he gave up three walks and a double.

Bud got better as he went along and was going great at the finish.

The Rajah is no genius but he knows how to get the best out of what he has, just as he did when winning a pennant and world series with the Cardinals many years ago.

Yes, the mastermind stuff is the pure hokum. If we had less of it we would have better and faster ball games and better players because any player is bound to get the jitters if he fears he is in constant danger of being yanked at any moment.

Giardello, Sanders Signed For Bout

NEWARK, N. J., May 20 (AP)—Joe Giardello, Philadelphia middleweight, and Hurley Sanders of Newark have signed for a Laurel Garden 10-round Memorial Day fight that will be telecast coast-to-coast.

This will be the second meeting of the pair. Giardello won by a decision at Brooklyn when both he and Sanders were just breaking into professional ranks.

Preakness On TV

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP)—A half hour description of the Preakness Saturday will be offered simultaneously on radio and television by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

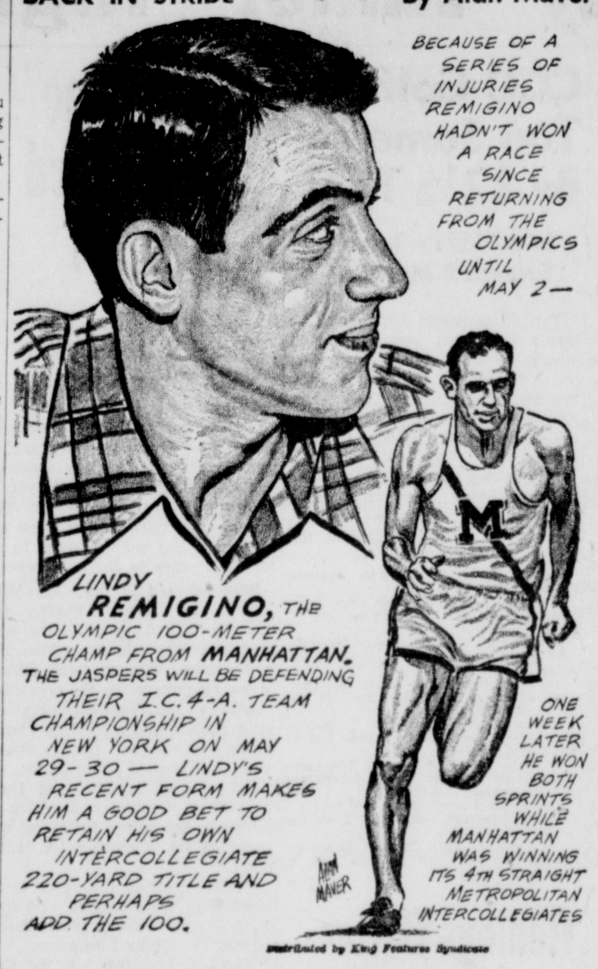

The broadcasts will start at 4:30 p.m. EST with the race itself scheduled to start at 4:45.

STAG LINES for men

by Bert Bacharach

Mohair Casuals

FASHION: A few weeks back, we mentioned the mohair tuxedo adopted by TV performers because of its shine under the lights. Well, you don't have to be in front of the cameras or even dressed formally now to get the advantages of mohair's lightweight sheen. One of the smartest casual garments for the oncoming warm season is the new alpaca jacket. It fits into a lot of well turned sport dress combinations—like the pearl-gray tie and slacks worn by Hollywood's Gene Nelson (at right).

Nelson Shines in Casual Coat

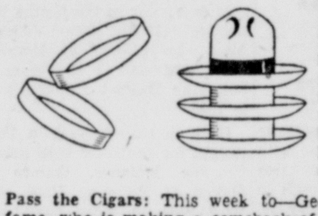

Hot-Weather Help: The National Hair Treatment Foundation warns that serious damage to the scalp can result from over-exposure to the sun between 10 a. m. and 4 p. m. A little ultra-violet is good for you—but not too much. Sit in the shade or wear a head covering part of the time. . . . Put away any of your shirts that have snug collars until next winter. They're too uncomfortable to have around your neck in the summer.

Travel Tips: If you're going out of the country, here are a few more reminders: Even with your legal allowance, there are certain branded perfumes, watches, etc., that cannot be brought back duty free. Be sure you can prove prior possession on everything you take out with you. Best idea is to check with the U. S. Customs Service. . . . If the water in a foreign country disagrees with you, chances are the ice in drinks will too!

June Groom: Here are answers to the most frequently asked questions about weddings: It's definitely improper to wear a tuxedo for a before-six p. m. wedding. For all but a formal daytime church wedding, wear a dark blue light-weight suit. . . . The traditional matching ties and gloves for male members of the wedding party can be dispensed with at an informal summer ceremony. . . . For evening semi-formal weddings, either white or dark tuxedos are proper—but the entire wedding party should dress uniformly.

Quotable Quotes: Carl Sandburg—"Slang is a language that takes off its coat—spits on its hands—and goes to work!" . . . Anonymous—"Sometimes a man thinks he has a clean conscience when he only has a poor memory." . . . Sir Philip Gibbs—"It's better to give than to lend—and it costs about the same thing."

Amateur Chef: While they say, "There's no such thing as a little garlic," you can get a subtle seasoning by rubbing just the lid of a pan with garlic. . . . To make better, stronger-flavored iced tea and coffee, freeze regular coffee and tea into ice cubes.

Hat Care: If you have more hats than will sit side-by-side on a shelf, ask your hat store for a few cardboard dividers (see drawing). Or you can make them yourself by gluing together a circle of cardboard. Then you can stack hats safely, without damaging the crowns.

Pass the Cigars: This week to—George White, of "Scandals" fame, who is making a comeback-of-the-year by producing the new hit tabloid musical show at a New York night club. He's heading back toward the top spot he shared in days gone by with such names as Ziegfeld and Earl Carroll.

Bad Track Again Delays Wheeling Meet

WHEELING, W. Va., May 20 (AP)—Track conditions delayed for one hour the start of the eight-race program at Wheeling Downs today.

Jockeys balked at riding the first race scheduled to start at 2:15 p.m. for the second straight day, reportedly over muddy track.

But Wheeling Downs officials said work crews labored around the clock after yesterday's 65 minute delay to get the track in shape. A spokesman for Wheeling Downs said jockeys agreed to start future races on time.

Olympic Planner Resigns His Job

Coles Says Post Is "Untenable"

MELBOURNE, May 20 (AP) — The chief Australian planner for the 1956 Olympic games resigned tonight—an act which was called a "national tragedy" by Melbourne's acting lord mayor.

"There was nothing left me but to resign," said Arthur W. Coles, who turned in his post as chairman of the Olympic Games Control Committee. "My position was untenable."

Coles gave up his job when the government decided not to build the Olympic swimming pool on the site accepted by the International Olympic Committee at its April meeting in Mexico City.

In Chicago, Avery Brundage, president of the IOC, said "something must be seriously wrong" with the plans for the games and that the IOC executive committee may hold an emergency meeting to consider another city.

"Mr. Coles is a conservative business man," said Brundage. "He certainly did not resign unless something seriously was wrong."

The first railroad bridge erected across the Mississippi river was built at Davenport, Ia., in 1856.

Health Officer Cites Progress In Sanitation

Uniform Regulations Speed Area Program

Legislation passed during the past few years has allowed the Allegany County Health Department to make big strides in sanitation, according to Dr. Winter R. Frantz, county health officer.

Prior to April 1950, the Health Department had no means of controlling the disposal of sewage in new construction when a public sewer was not available.

Can Control Sewage

After the passage of a State Board of Health regulation, the Board of Allegany Commissioners, acting as a Board of Health, adopted the regulation and ordered that, before a county building permit could be issued, sewage disposal plans must be approved by the Health Department.

Adoption of the regulation, Dr. Frantz said, gave the Health Department control of sewage disposal on new housing and power to correct the flow of sewage flowing upon highways and other properties.

He said the program has been well received by the public, the State Roads Commission and the County Commissioners. Future effects of the program will be of immeasurable value, he added.

Have Uniform Laws

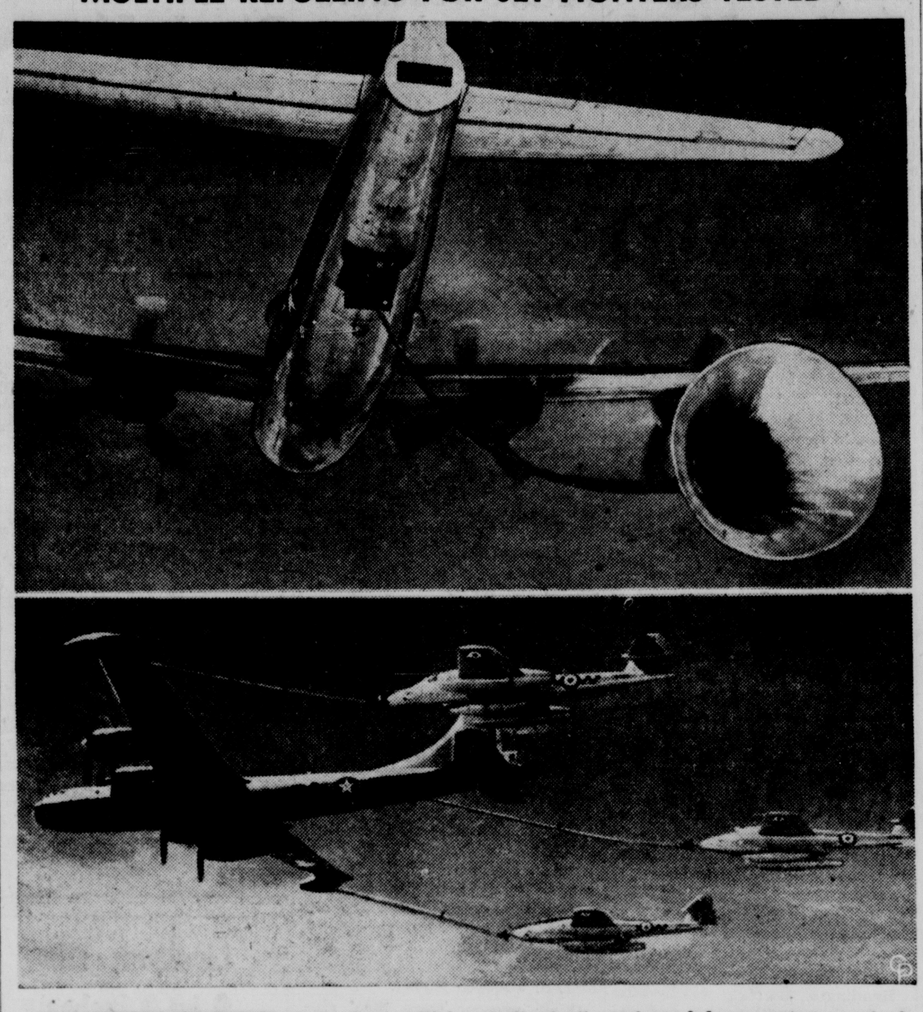

Improvement in restaurant sanitation in Cumberland has been possible under a 1945 ordinance, "Regulating Eating and Drinking Establishments."

Last fall, the same ordinance was adopted by the County Commissioners, providing the Health Department with a uniform sanitary program for the entire county.

Improvements in housing in Allegany County has resulted from a county-wide regulation on the Hygiene of Housing, Dr. Frantz said.

The regulation has made it possible to bring improvement in a large number of sub-standard dwellings and the razing of a dozen sub-standard homes last year.

Nash subseqeuntly was sworn in for another two-year term in that position.

The same company was called to Oldtown Road and Wempe Drive at 5:16 p.m. when Box 69 at the corner was pulled. Firemen said neighbors saw a small boy turn in the alarm, then run away before the fire engine arrived.

Central Firemen answered an alarm at 421 North Mechanic Street shortly before 6 p.m. when trash being burned in a back yard led residents of the area to believe the house was afire.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD, May 20—(INS)—What a tender and lovely Juliet Pier Angeli will make. And, I say, "will make" because Dore Schary has given the signal to Producer John Houseman to prepare Shakespeare's immortal love story, "Romeo And Juliet" for MGM's 1953 schedule.

Many great stars have played Juliet—Jane Cowl, Ethel Barrymore, Norma Shearer, Vivien Leigh to name just a few. But Pier is the most youthful Juliet, who was only 16.

I suppose Dore's decision to take another flyer into Shakespeare is due to attention "Julius Caesar" has received. And, Houseman is a good production guide because of his experience with Shakespeare, "Julius Caesar" on stage and screen and "King Lear" on the stage.

Ann Baxter goes directly from Munich to London to rehearse with Charles Laughton for "John Brown's Body." Charles is making a picture, "Hobson's Choice," in London.

This Baxter gal is plenty hot these days, and one proof is that she takes over the Judith Anderson role in "John Brown's Body," with Tyrone Power and Raymond Massey. According to Paul Gregory, who produces the show, the troupe will be ready to go on tour September 1.

And by the way, there's no truth to the reports that "Carnival," the picture Ann is making in Munich, has been called off. There was a little labor trouble, but that has been cleared up.

Carlton Carpenter and MGM have said goodbye. Over the long distance telephone, Carlton told me, "The most wonderful thing has happened! I openin 'Almanac' on the Broadway stage with Hermoine Gingold, British comedienne. John Murray Anderson is producing this show, which is a break for me."

Amazing how many contracts are not being taken up and amazing how many young stars are going to Broadway. However, Carlton is the first of the young stars. Usually it's the older ones who part company with the studios.

We saw a test of Gaby Bruyere at Joseph Schenck's house. She's as pretty as a picture. She's a good actress. She's intelligent. She wrote the sketch for her test herself, and it is a playlet.

Gaby is under contract to RKO, but she says she is returning to Paris for a stage engagement. She says she made dozens and dozens of French films, and her last one was with Claud Dauphin in a Jacques Duval story.

She is studying English and within weeks she has learned to speak rather well.

"Melba," the musical that Producer Sam Speigel made in Europe, will de dubbed in stereophonic sound and shown on a wide screen during its New York run.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at Random:

Mona Freeman received her first long airmail letter from Bing Crosby in Europe, after looking over the continental beauties. Guess Bing's decided Mona is the prettiest.

Isn't Singer Eddie Fischer romancing Joanne Gilbert like crazy via long distance from New York? Thought her heart belonged to Danny Arnold.

Congratulations to the Gordon MacRaes celebrating their 12th happy anniversary at the Capitol Theater in Washington, D. C. This is Sheilah's first professional stint with Gordon and I hear she's great.

Gilbert Roland arrives in Washington tomorrow to visit his two little girls, Jill and Linda, who live there with their mother, Constance Bennett Coulter.

That badly cut hand Lou Costello is nursing was cut on a steel tripod which fell over during a scene for the Abbott and Costello TV series.

Next Tuesday, the William Perlbergs start driving across country to New York with their son Bill Jr., on a part pleasure and part business jaunt. Bill Sr., will show Bing's newest, "Little Boy Lost," to the exhibitors.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

The celebrated mountain of Japan, Fujiyama is visible far out to sea. Its crater is 500 feet deep and about two and one-half miles in circumference.

Billie Jean Atkinson

who will appear with the Cumberland Starlettes of '53 presented by the Star Dance Studio at Carroll Hall Friday night.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD, May 20—(INS)—What a tender and lovely Juliet Pier Angeli will make. And, I say, "will make" because Dore Schary has given the signal to Producer John Houseman to prepare Shakespeare's immortal love story, "Romeo And Juliet" for MGM's 1953 schedule.

Many great stars have played Juliet—Jane Cowl, Ethel Barrymore, Norma Shearer, Vivien Leigh to name just a few. But Pier is the most youthful Juliet, who was only 16.

I suppose Dore's decision to take another flyer into Shakespeare is due to attention "Julius Caesar" has received. And, Houseman is a good production guide because of his experience with Shakespeare, "Julius Caesar" on stage and screen and "King Lear" on the stage.

Ann Baxter goes directly from Munich to London to rehearse with Charles Laughton for "John Brown's Body." Charles is making a picture, "Hobson's Choice," in London.

This Baxter gal is plenty hot these days, and one proof is that she takes over the Judith Anderson role in "John Brown's Body," with Tyrone Power and Raymond Massey. According to Paul Gregory, who produces the show, the troupe will be ready to go on tour September 1.

And by the way, there's no truth to the reports that "Carnival," the picture Ann is making in Munich, has been called off. There was a little labor trouble, but that has been cleared up.

Carlton Carpenter and MGM have said goodbye. Over the long distance telephone, Carlton told me, "The most wonderful thing has happened! I openin 'Almanac' on the Broadway stage with Hermoine Gingold, British comedienne. John Murray Anderson is producing this show, which is a break for me."

Amazing how many contracts are not being taken up and amazing how many young stars are going to Broadway. However, Carlton is the first of the young stars. Usually it's the older ones who part company with the studios.

We saw a test of Gaby Bruyere at Joseph Schenck's house. She's as pretty as a picture. She's a good actress. She's intelligent. She wrote the sketch for her test herself, and it is a playlet.

Gaby is under contract to RKO, but she says she is returning to Paris for a stage engagement. She says she made dozens and dozens of French films, and her last one was with Claud Dauphin in a Jacques Duval story.

She is studying English and within weeks she has learned to speak rather well.

"Melba," the musical that Producer Sam Speigel made in Europe, will de dubbed in stereophonic sound and shown on a wide screen during its New York run.

Sam, who is in town, has plenty of time to do this because the premiere won't be held until June 24 at the Capitol in New York. He is waiting until Patrice Munsel, the star of "Melba," is well enough to appear. Her baby is just a week old.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at Random:

Mona Freeman received her first long airmail letter from Bing Crosby in Europe, after looking over the continental beauties. Guess Bing's decided Mona is the prettiest.

Isn't Singer Eddie Fischer romancing Joanne Gilbert like crazy via long distance from New York? Thought her heart belonged to Danny Arnold.

Gilbert Roland arrives in Washington tomorrow to visit his two little girls, Jill and Linda, who live there with their mother, Constance Bennett Coulter.

That badly cut hand Lou Costello is nursing was cut on a steel tripod which fell over during a scene for the Abbott and Costello TV series.

Next Tuesday, the William Perlbergs start driving across country to New York with their son Bill Jr., on a part pleasure and part business jaunt. Bill Sr., will show Bing's newest, "Little Boy Lost," to the exhibitors.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

The celebrated mountain of Japan, Fujiyama is visible far out to sea. Its crater is 500 feet deep and about two and one-half miles in circumference.

Billie Jean Atkinson

who will appear with the Cumberland Starlettes of '53 presented by the Star Dance Studio at Carroll Hall Friday night.

On The Line

by Bob Considine

NEW YORK—(INS)—The world capitals have their eyes on the June 7 elections in Italy, where the Communists and their Nenni Socialists comprise perhaps the strongest leftist political party outside of the U.S.S.R.

There are other eyes on that election, and none are owned by smaller persons (or, so the persons themselves feel) than those of Oresti Cerri and William Porter Carloni. They are the two priests who formed Orphans of Italy, Inc., and set up two camps for homeless boys near Milan, a strongly pro-Communist city.

That was in 1945 and it came about in a dramatic way. Cerri and Carloni, whose mother was an American, had both served as chaplains with Italian forces. Carloni, who volunteered because his mother, brother and four sisters—all Italian citizens—where under suspicion in Florence for having pro-American leanings, served with Italian troops and airmen on the French front, at Tobruk, and before Stalingrad.

But a run-in with a Nazi officer, whom he heard denouncing the Pope, made him a marked man. He was forced to escape to Switzerland after Hitler took charge of all Italy, and there he and fellow-escapee Cerri made a pledge.

When the war was over they'd find the orphans of Italians killed on the Russian front and help them as best they could. Both priests were certain that communism would take strong root in the ruins of Italy, and that it would find its richest harvest among the young and hungry.

Monsignor Carroll-Abbing was at work with his boys towns of Italy, to the south of Rome. Cerri and Carloni moved into the Milan area. From the first hour it has been almost a life and death struggle with the Communists for the bodies and souls of the countless orphans or street gypsies of the area.

The Communist camp nearby does not call itself communist. It is called something with an Italian flavor. It has better tool shops than the poverty-stricken priests can afford; better buildings. Last February and March the boys under the wings of the two priests had only cheese and bread to eat. the boys in the other camp got good pasta and 'minestrone and often meat. The mothers of three boys being cared for by the priests took their sons away and put them under the Communists.

The Reds do not openly preach against the church in Italy. They have found a better method, so far as work among the youth is concerned. At their camps, where girls mix freely with the boys, they stage mock weddings between 14 and 15 year olds; encourage unchaperoned dances, schedule picnics or sports events during times normally given over to church services in Italy.

The two struggling priests, living from day to day, taking no salaries, existing on contributions, try to reassure the older people who come to them and say, "They must mean well, these people. They do much for our little ones." The priests tell them, "you had 25 years of fascism and you see how it ended. This, too, is totalitarian and you will wind up the same way if you embrace it." But some nod and say, "In the meantime, we have promise of food and a job."

Arturo Toscanini, Mrs. Francesca Lodge, and some good people in Brooklyn, Fitchburg, Mass., Montclair, N. J., Denver, San Francisco and Los Angeles keep Orphans of Italy, Inc., going. Father Carloni is visiting the committee as present, using as his base a friend's apartment at 58 West 57th Street (Studio 27). He is a lone man shyly attempting to win a few allies to the appallingly unequal battle he must fight.

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Arturo Toscanini, Mrs. Francesca Lodge, and some good people in Brooklyn, Fitchburg, Mass., Montclair, N. J., Denver, San Francisco and Los Angeles keep Orphans of Italy, Inc., going. Father Carloni is visiting the committee as present, using as his base a friend's apartment at 58 West 57th Street (Studio 27). He is a lone man shyly attempting to win a few allies to the appallingly unequal battle he must fight.

Yesterday's Answer

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quotation

C Q R H I U W R Y C U K L Y X P Y K T R Z M
C Q R Y L Y L L R T Y J Y Z X Z G C F U L A T H C Z
P Z X M Z L I C Z U X H L R T Y J Y Z X — V G L W R.

Yesterday's Cryptoquote: UPON MY SOUL YOU MUSTN'T COME INTO THE PLACE SAYING YOU WANT TO KNOW, YOU KNOW—DICKENS.

Lonaconing Asks School Building For Town Center

Protest Is Lodged On Water Rate Boost

The Mayor and Council of Lonaconing this week asked the Board of Allegany County Commissioners to turn over the Jackson Elementary School to the town as a community center.

The school will be discontinued in June as part of the county school consolidation program and students will report to the Central Elementary School in the fall.

The County Commissioners indicated in 1950 that the Town of Lonaconing would be given first consideration in the disposal of the school building.

Oppose Water Boost

The Mayor and Council, at its meeting Tuesday night, lodged an official complaint on the request of the Lonaconing Water Company for increased rates.

The formal protest was adopted at the request of Mayor Alexander. James S. Getty, town attorney, will represent the community at a Public Service Commission hearing on the boost. Mayor Alexander will also attend if his schedule permits.

The company early this month asked the PSC to approve increasing its water rates about 50 per cent on May 29, boosting its net revenue about $12,000 a year.

Set Tax Rate

The Mayor and Council set the tax rate at 75 cents for each $100 of assessable property, the same as at present.

City officials also accepted a report from judges of the recent municipal election.

Newly elected officials will take over their duties at a meeting June 2 at 7:30 p.m.

Business will include the appointment of two bailiffs, a street maintenance man, treasurer, clerk and attorney.

Applications for the positions may be filed with the town clerk before June 2.

Alvin C. Neat Post No. 5280, Veterans of Foreign Wars, was given permission to have a carnival in town during the summer. Good Will Volunteer Fire Company was granted a permit to have a carnival the week of May 25.

Mayor Virgil Alexander was elected to represent the town of Lonaconing at a conference of the Maryland Municipal League on June 12 and June 13 at Ocean City.

Rec Forum Planned

A group of Central High school students of the Problems of Democracy class, with their instructor, Thomas P. Staup, attended to observe the Mayor and Council in session.

The mayor and his council were invited to participate in the forum meeting at Central High school Friday morning to discuss the needs of a recreation program for the community. All members of the town council who can will attend.

A complaint was received from a family on garbage disposing near their home, and a letter was directed by the city clerk to take care of the problem.

A discussion was held on extensive street repairs. Furnace street extended and lower Jackson street were included in the road repairs project.

Loch Lynn Boy Dies In Fall From Pony

Services Set For Ralph H. Weeks Jr.

A third-grade pupil of Loch Lynn Elementary School in Garrett County died Tuesday evening from injuries sustained when he was thrown from a pony near his home.

He is Ralph Hamilton Weeks Jr., eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. Weeks Sr. The child was pronounced dead at Garrett Memorial Hospital in Oakland by Dr. E. I. Baumgartner, deputy medical examiner, who said the boy died from a fracture of the skull.

Young Weeks and his father had been scooping dirt near their home with the scoop hitched to the pony. As they were travelling down the macadam road the pony was reported to have started to run and young Weeks, riding bareback, lost his balance and was thrown from the animal.

He struck his head on the highway after being thrown from the pony. A motorist passing by rushed the child to the hospital where he was pronounced dead at about 5:30 p. m.

The child was born in Crellin, December 24, 1944. Surviving besides his parents are a sister, Janet Kay Weeks, at home; maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Liller, Loch Lynn; paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Weeks, Terra Alta.

The victim was a member of Loch Lynn Baptist Church where he attended Sunday School. A funeral service will be conducted at the church tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. with Rev. William C. Rogers, pastor, officiating, assisted by Rev. Blair Burr, pastor of United Brethren Church.

Interment will be in Pleasant Valley Cemetery. The body is at the home of his parents.

Local Brothers Escape From Howard Co. Jail

Woodrow, Michael Leslie Sought Here

Two former Cumberland men were the subject of an intensive manhunt last night after they knocked out an elderly guard to escape from the Howard County Jail at Ellicott City.

They are Woodrow J. Leslie, 35, former house painter in Cumberland, and Michael Leslie, 28, who was well known as an amateur boxer here a few years ago.

Also at large are Albert Smith, 34-year-old Baltimore Negro who had pleaded guilty to charges of armed robbery and assault with intent to kill, and Robert R. Smith, 54, also of Baltimore, but no relation to Albert.

Police here were alerted to be on the lookout for the Leslie brothers in case they should return to the city.

The Leslies had been awaiting trial on charges of burglarizing a service station, and Robert Smith faced trial on charges of breaking into a Sykesville tavern.

In making their escape Tuesday night, the four slammed a jail door against Kenneth Cross, 69-year-old night warden, as he was opening it to let a trusty into the lockup. The four skipped out while Cross lay unconscious on the floor.

Police believe the Leslies and Robert Smith escaped on foot into the wooded area along the Patapsco River between Ellicott City and U. S. 40. All roads in the area were being patrolled last night by State Police and officers from Howard and Baltimore counties.

Albert Smith, meanwhile, is believed to have reached Baltimore. A cab driver told police he picked up a man and took him to Baltimore shortly after the jailbreak.

Michael Leslie fought several bouts in amateur boxing shows here shortly after World War II. A clever boxer in the lightweight class, he left town a few years ago. He and his brother had been living in Baltimore and Washington.

Man Whittles Wooden Key For Jail Escape

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., May 20 (AP)—Police widened their search today for a 25-year-old Buckhannon, W. Va., man who apparently unlocked the door of his cell in the Jefferson County jail last Tuesday with a key fashioned from a broomstick.

The escapee, Donald A. Lyons, was being held here for a hearing on probation revocation proceedings.

Lyons' cellmate, Jerry Melvin Buracker, convicted of murder and awaiting transfer to the state penitentiary, told police Lyons had been whittling at a stick a few days ago.

It was not known where he got the piece of wood or the knife.

State Police Corporal C. A. Hehle said Lyons, after unlocking the door, apparently went upstairs and made his way to the roof of the three-story building.

He was thought to have climbed down a ladder left there by plumbers who were making repairs to the spouting the previous day.

Lyons was sent to the penitentiary four years ago on a breaking and entering charge and violated probation recently in Rhode Island where he was involved in an automobile theft, according to police.

Charge Is Filed In Fatal Crash

A speeding charge has been filed against a local driver who escaped injury in an accident in which his sister was fatally hurt early Sunday, State Police said last night.

Trooper Donald R. Wade filed the charge against Raymond Ellsworth Casteel, 25, of 165 Bedford Street, as a result of an accident on Bedford Road just north of Nave's Cross Road.

Casteel's sister, Mrs. Dorothy Emma Simons, 29, of Bedford Road, was pinned beneath her car after it left the highway and overturned early Sunday. She died Tuesday in Sacred Heart Hospital.

State Police said Casteel, who was following close behind Mrs. Simons' car, had to roll his own vehicle over in order to avoid striking her car.

He is scheduled for a hearing next Tuesday at 10 a. m. in Trial Magistrates Court.

Seek Site For CD Siren

A conference will be held this afternoon between Civil Defense and city officials in an attempt to find a location for a large air attack warning siren in South Cumberland.

Attending will be William G. Barger, county CD director; Arthur B. Gibson, city CD director, and Charles R. Nuzum, city engineer.

Civil Defense officials have indicated they will relocate a siren planned at a city park area near South End Fire Company if an alternate site can be found which will work as well.

City officials suggested, following vehement protests from residents near the park area, that a city-owned site could be found nearby.

City Rec Board Plans Action On Summer Staff

Recommendations on the appointment of 45 summer recreation workers will be made by the Cumberland Recreation Board at a meeting tonight at 8:30 p. m. in City Hall.

Included are 27 playground leaders and directors, 10 persons to operate pools at Constitution Park and Pine Avenue Playground and leaders for eight play fields.

The board recently recommended that salary schedules for summer workers be adjusted to allow extra pay for those with experience.

Action on the request was tabled by the Mayor and Council at a meeting May 11. A decision is expected Monday.

Robert E. Pence, city recreation director, yesterday pointed out that any citizen who desires to present any matter to the Recreation Board may do so at any regular meeting, after communicating with Albert S. Paye, chairman of the board.

Two positions on the board must be filled in the near future. They are Dr. Thomas Robinson, who has resigned to re-enter the Armed Forces, and Mrs. Lenore E. Resser, whose term expired May 9.

It is expected that the board will discuss possible successors tonight.

Pence announced yesterday that equipment is being set up at all playgrounds but that leaders will not be available until the playgrounds open June 22.

The Allegany senior served as city attorney Monday when the Youth Mayor and Council took over the reins of the city for a day.

He also has been active in the school band, United Nations club, and French club.

Gas Dealers Stopped From Picketing Oldtown Road Service Station

An injunction has been issued in Allegany County Circuit Court against the Cumberland Gasoline Dealers Association, preventing it from picketing an East Oldtown Road service station and grocery store.

The complainant, Mrs. Beulah V. Burke, trading as the H. E. Smith Service Station and Grocery Store, charged the dealers were demanding that she increase the price she is charging for gasoline to the prices being charged by members of the association.

The injunction issued Tuesday by Associate Judge George Henderson restrains the gasoline dealers from interfering with her place of business.

Bond Posted

However, liberty is reserved the association in the order to move for the dissolution upon giving the complainant two days notice.

Mrs. Burke was required to post $1,000 bond with the court in connection with the issuance of the injunction.

Mrs. Burke, through her attorney, Harry I. Stegmaier, filed the petition against Joseph F. Andrews, 1201 Oldtown Road; Isaac J. Smith, 300 Greene Street; David L. Rinker, 736 North Centre Street; Ralph B. Gehauf, 400 Park Street; Marshall B. Shuey, 231 North Centre Street; Homer A. Welsh, 638 Greene Street; Floyd M. Athey, 207 Baltimore Avenue, and the Cumberland Gasoline Dealers Association.

Mrs. Burkey explained she was filing the petition for herself and in behalf of others similarly situated.

She pointed out that for many years she has been at this 735 East Oldtown Road location. The petition declared that the defendants are operators, owners or employes of gasoline stations.

Visited By Defendants

The petition charges that at times she was visited by the defendants, their agents or employes demanding that she charge 27.9 cents a gallon for straight gas instead of 24.9 cents as she is charging.

She also said they demanded that she increase the price she is asking for high test gas from 26.9 cents a gallon to 29.9 cents a gallon.

The prices, the petition states, were "arbitrarily selected without any basis in fact or law by the defendants individually and as an association to be charged by all retail gas dealers in Cumberland and vicinity and said demands have been repeatedly and continuously made by these defendants upon your oratrix."

The petition also points out that during the week starting Sunday, May 10, the defendants agents and representatives, paraded at her establishment with placards and banners demanding her prices be raised to the prices the defendants are charging.

Cites Customer Loss

The marching up and down during day and night business hours, the petition declares, amounts to intimidation and coercion and included "insulting remarks."

Mrs. Burke contends as a result she has lost a large number of customers who were forced, because of the marching up and down by the defendants, to discontinue patronizing her.

Maryland law prevents the courts from filing an injunction against a labor organization during a labor dispute.

This state law, called the Kimble Act as Allegany County's senator, Robert B. Kimble, sponsored it, corresponds to the national Norris-LaGuardia Act, which performs the same purpose nationally.

However, it was explained that there is no law preventing the courts from filing an injunction against a dealers' association in a non-labor dispute.

Lonaconing Asks School Building For Town Center

Protest Is Lodged On Water Rate Boost

The Mayor and Council of Lonaconing this week asked the Board of Allegany County Commissioners to turn over the Jackson Elementary School to the town as a community center.

The school will be discontinued in June as part of the county school consolidation program and students will report to the Central Elementary School in the fall.

The County Commissioners indicated in 1950 that the Town of Lonaconing would be given first consideration in the disposal of the school building.

Oppose Water Boost

The Mayor and Council, at its meeting Tuesday night, lodged an official complaint on the request of the Lonaconing Water Company for increased rates.

The formal protest was adopted at the request of Mayor Alexander. James S. Getty, town attorney, will represent the community at a Public Service Commission hearing on the boost. Mayor Alexander will also attend if his schedule permits.

The company early this month asked the PSC to approve increasing its water rates about 50 per cent on May 29, boosting its net revenue about $12,000 a year.

Set Tax Rate

The Mayor and Council set the tax rate at 75 cents for each $100 of assessable property, the same as at present.

City officials also accepted a report from judges of the recent municipal election.

Newly elected officials will take over their duties at a meeting June 2 at 7:30 p.m.

Business will include the appointment of two bailiffs, a street maintenance man, treasurer, clerk and attorney.

Applications for the positions may be filed with the town clerk before June 2.

Local Brothers Escape From Howard Co. Jail

Woodrow, Michael Leslie Sought Here

Two former Cumberland men were the subject of an intensive manhunt last night after they knocked out an elderly guard to escape from the Howard County Jail at Ellicott City.

They are Woodrow J. Leslie, 35, former house painter in Cumberland, and Michael Leslie, 28, who was well known as an amateur boxer here a few years ago.

Also at large are Albert Smith, 34-year-old Baltimore Negro who had pleaded guilty to charges of armed robbery and assault with intent to kill, and Robert R. Smith, 54, also of Baltimore, but no relation to Albert.

Police here were alerted to be on the lookout for the Leslie brothers in case they should return to the city.

The Leslies had been awaiting trial on charges of burglarizing a service station, and Robert Smith faced trial on charges of breaking into a Sykesville tavern.

In making their escape Tuesday night, the four slammed a jail door against Kenneth Cross, 69-year-old night warden, as he was opening it to let a trusty into the lockup. The four skipped out while Cross lay unconscious on the floor.

Police believe the Leslies and Robert Smith escaped on foot into the wooded area along the Patapsco River between Ellicott City and U. S. 40. All roads in the area were being patrolled last night by State Police and officers from Howard and Baltimore counties.

Albert Smith, meanwhile, is believed to have reached Baltimore. A cab driver told police he picked up a man and took him to Baltimore shortly after the jailbreak.

Man Whittles Wooden Key For Jail Escape

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., May 20 (AP)—Police widened their search today for a 25-year-old Buckhannon, W. Va., man who apparently unlocked the door of his cell in the Jefferson County jail last Tuesday with a key fashioned from a broomstick.

The escapee, Donald A. Lyons, was being held here for a hearing on probation revocation proceedings.

Lyons' cellmate, Jerry Melvin Buracker, convicted of murder and awaiting transfer to the state penitentiary, told police Lyons had been whittling at a stick a few days ago.

It was not known where he got the piece of wood or the knife.

State Police Corporal C. A. Hehle said Lyons, after unlocking the door, apparently went upstairs and made his way to the roof of the three-story building.

He was thought to have climbed down a ladder left there by plumbers who were making repairs to the spouting the previous day.

Lyons was sent to the penitentiary four years ago on a breaking and entering charge and violated probation recently in Rhode Island where he was involved in an automobile theft, according to police.
